Introduction

The Screaming Eagles once again flew from their peaceful nest in the United States to the heat of battle in a faraway land. On December 13, 1968, the 101st Airborne Division marked its first year as a complete division in Vietnam.

In the past year, the scream of the Eagle was heard from Bien Hoa to Song Be, from Cu Chi to Phan Thiet, from Hue to the A Shau Valley, and throughout the I Corps tactical zone.

After the Vietnam conflict has ended, the reputation of the Screaming Eagles will live on in the hearts and minds of the Vietnamese people. For not only has the Division accounted for more than 7,953 enemy killed, but the extensive PSYOPS and civil affairs programs have created a stable environment for the reconstruction of their war torn country.

On December 13, 1967, the proud colors of the 101st Airborne Division arrived in Vietnam to carry on the Screaming Eagles' "Rendezvous With Destiny" in Southeast Asia. It was a memorable day as the 1st Brigade, here since 1965, welcomed the rest of the Division to the pursuit of freedom.

The airlift from Ft. Campbell to Bien Hoa was accomplished in the best tradition of the Division—AIRBORNE ALL THE WAY—the most prodigious move to combat ever attempted.

Following the gallant precedents set by the 1st Brigade, the Screaming Eagles wasted little time bringing their awesome might upon the enemy. A new generation of paratroopers began shaping history in Vietnam as their predecessors had in Normandy, Holland and Bastogne.

From the defense of the U.S. Embassy in Saigon to the repulse of the enemy at Hue, the Division quickly set the pattern that was to spell success in its endeavors.

While patiently waiting the time when the full Division would be together once again, Screaming Eagles proved their proficiency and flexibility as they fought side by side with the Army, Navy, Air Force, and Marines—both the ARVN and U.S.

The first year in Vietnam has been successful in every respect. Men and units of the Division have defeated the Viet Cong Infrastructure, paced the accomplishments of pacification, and have fashioned model relationship with ARVN units.

No tribute, however, would be complete without a conscientious appreciation of the 3rd Brigade of our sister Airborne Division, in July, I said that "I was the luckiest man alive." I still feel that way and always will; it has been a rare privilege to be a part of the tremendous accomplishments provided by the men of the 101st. Never can these days of complete satisfaction be taken from me—they shall remain seared in my memory throughout my life.

Midway through its first year, the Division was called upon to display its professionalism and proficiency as it met the challenge of conversion to the airmobile concept. The speed and perfection with which this metamorphosis was achieved proved once again that nothing is impossible for the Airborne Soldier.

Perhaps the crowning . . . . . our first year came with the return of the 1st Brigade from its nomadic role to the Division fold—once again the Screaming Eagles were as one.

While there is no point in recounting the detailed history of the Division—it is contained here in word and picture—I would be remiss if I did not pay reverent tribute to those fallen Eagles who have made the supreme sacrifice so that others may live in peace and freedom. To each of them we owe an endless debt that can be repaid only by the actions of those who continue.

To every soldier who has so faithfully served this Division, it is my fervent hope that in years to come, this book will evoke pleasant memories, reminiscences of jobs well done, and reminders that in Southeast Asia, as in every other mission, the 101st succeeded the only way it knows how—AIRBORNE ALL THE WAY!"

As I reminisce back over my years as Commander of the 101st Airborne Division, I ask myself, "What greater heights can a man reach?" The opportunity to command the famous "Screaming Eagles," and especially during battle, is one of the greatest honors that one man can receive. I am doubly fortunate insofar as I brought the Division, minus the 1st Brigade, to Vietnam.

A little over one year ago, at Fort Campbell, Kentucky, I took command knowing we would face difficult tasks ahead. In August, of last year, the official notification was received that the Division was to deploy to Vietnam. Training cycles were established, personnel departed for off-post and out of state schooling, loading lists were updated, and mountains of administrative planning began to rise.

When General Westmoreland requested our presence, at an earlier date than planned, it was necessary to accelerate our training program. This was accomplished and you were ready. We deployed 10,356 men more than 10,000 miles from Ft. Campbell in Operation Eagle Thrust. We closed the Division in 41 days, ready for our mission. Every man in this Division who participated in this historic move is to be commended for a job well done.

On 13 December 1967, I arrived, with my staff, at Bien Hoa Air Base and reported to General Westmoreland,

"The 101st Airborne Division reports for combat in Vietnam." After a short in-country training period, you were ready to meet and defeat the enemy. Uniting with our 1st Brigade, the Division once again became a balanced fighting force. You have written with blood and sweat, your place in history, and continue to fulfill the Division's "Rendezvous with Destiny"—Bien Hoa, Phouc Vinh, Cu Chik, Song Be, Phan Rang, Phan Thiet, Bao Loc, Hue/Phu Bai, Phouc Yen, La Chu, Veghel, Pinky, Bastogne, Sally and Eagle are familiar names, recalling enduring memories to us all.

I have pushed hard and demanded much, always knowing what the results would be—success and victory. I have talked to you in burning villages, sand-bagged bunkers, foxholes, wet jungles, and in the blazing sun on the coastal dunes. Your answers to my queries added much to my knowledge of the success of our tactics. The tactics used by this Division are not new; they are only the sound application of good principles of war. You came with a job to do—defeat the enemy—and you have done this job well.

To accomplish this we have employed every resource in the command, day and night. My philosophy is simple: continuous attack with multiple actions; always attack under an umbrella of friendly artillery; when a lucrative target is found, mass forces; and company size actions continuous around the clock on all fronts. You are experts at the art of night fighting and jungle fighting; you have learned well the valuable lesson of reacting violently to enemy fire, never break contact, and shoot low.

You are a well decorated, distinguished unit. We have tried to decorate every deserving individual. This would be nearly every man in the Division. During the last six months you have established records that other units have not surpassed in much longer periods of time. This is a tribute to your dedication, "will to win," and discipline as an Airborne Division. The curtain now unfolds on an era that will bring new glory to this proud unit. Let your memories remain strong and keep your driving sense of competition, excellence, and aggressiveness—AIRBORNE.

There Is A Soldier

There is a soldier . . . whether a private or a general officer, he is a soldier. His feelings, actions, and mannerisms are of such a variety that when blended together, they reflect the face of America.

A definitive picture of the soldier is impossible. There is no rank, no race, no religion. A soldier is one who has contributed his mind and body to the service of his country.

In the end, the soldier is a man dedicated to the American way of life that many take for granted. Tomorrow, when you take that hot shower, eat that hot meal, or cast your vote, remember . . . there is a soldier.

Screaming Eagles Arrive

Screaming Eagles Arrive

The father of the Airborne once claimed the Screaming Eagles have no history, but a "Rendezvous with Destiny." Maj. Gen. William C. Lee's premonition of 25 years ago gained added force with the quick arrival in-country of the remaining paratroopers from the 101st Airborne Division.

The Division minus one brigade left Ft. Campbell, Ky., under the command of Maj. Gen. O. M. Barsanti, and was flown to Vietnam with a majority of its combat equipment. This marked the first time a force of more than 10,000 troops had been flown directly into the Vietnam combat zone.

The Screaming Eagles arrived to continue the Vietnam Odyssey of the Division's First Brigade. Since disembarking at Cam Ranh Bay on July 29, 1965, this brigade maintained a reputation with the enemy as one of the most feared United States units in Vietnam.

The secrecy that cloaked Operation Eagle Thrust could not cover up the excitement and enthusiasm of the big move. After reviewing the pre-deployment status of the 101st, Army Chief of Staff General Harold K. Johnson said, "I can only say that I am even more impressed than ever with the undeniable dedication of the Screaming Eagles. I have always been proud of our soldiers in Vietnam, but the fact that approximately 1,000 members of the 101st who have already served in Vietnam—from battalion commanders to E-2's—have volunteered to return to that country with the Division, has intensified my pride and esteem."

With a proud heritage to live up to, the paratroopers of the 101st Airborne Division arrived in the III Corps tactical zone with a three fold mission: Win the people, Win the battle, Win in Vietnam!!!

Support For The Job Ahead

Government issue number 11B20P is a highly specialized piece of Army ordnance which has been known to function for extended time spans without fuel, maintenance or supervision, operating solely on a built-in, inexhaustible supply of what is known at Ft. Benning as "guts."

To insure that 11B20P, the airborne infantryman, has more than his own fortitude to sustain him, there exists in within the 101st Airbone Division a vast complex of men and material know as Support Command.

The single "raison d'être" for Support Command is the mud-stained, sweet-soaked, battle-hardened line doggie—the boonie rat, the ground-pounder, the crunchie, the dog-face, the grunt.—11B20P.

He needs his mail and an occasional newspaper. He needs a medic to care for his feet, and a chaplain to care for his soul. He needs new clothing when the jungle shreds his old one. He needs weapons and ammunition that work when his life depends on them; and that means they must work every time. He's a fighter, and does not have time to worry whether his personnel and finance records are in order. He considers himself very lucky if he gets a hot meal once a day.

Support command devotes itself entirely to 11B20P, because 11B20P has the second hardest job in the world. The first hardest job in the world belongs to the man on the other side, who has to fight him.

Tet

Rumors filled the air days before the annual TET cease fire, that there was a planned enemy offensive. Every Screaming Eagle went on alert, anticipating such a move. At 3 a.m. on January 31, the attack began. Rockets and mortars poured into the Bien Hoa Army and Air Force complex, allowing the enemy maneuver elements to move within striking distance of the base areas.

At 5 a.m., the enemy force launched their ground attack. At the same time there was an attack on the U.S. Embassy in Saigon. A platoon of paratroopers from the 2nd Brigade made a rooftop assault and secured the embassy floor by floor. The attack on Bien Hoa was driven off by gunships and organic weapons fire by 10:00 that morning. The same day, the 2nd Bn., 506th Abn. Inf. was airlifted from Phuoc Vinh to sweep the immediate area surrounding the Eagle basecamp. During the fighting and a succeeding follow-up operation named Uniontown, the Division amassed a total of 851 enemy killed.

Jeb Stuart

Just prior to the TET Offensive, the units of the 2nd Brigade deployed north to I Corps to join the 1st Air Cavalry Division in Operation Jeb Stuart. Initially landing and setting up at the Phu Bai airfield, the 2nd Brigade troopers started search operations immediately and soon moved north to LZ Sally. At the outbreak of the TET Offensive, 2nd Brigade troopers under the operational control of the 1st Cav, shared the fighting in the battle of Quang Tri and Hue, killing 94 enemy who had tried to penetrate Screaming Eagle defenses.

During the following weeks the score of enemy killed and captured mounted as 2nd Brigade troopers cleaned out resistance in numerous villages between Hue and Quang Tri. The 1st Bn., 502nd Abn. Inf. launched a road clearing operation along Highway 1 south of Quang Tri. Villagers pinpointed an NVA battalion in an ambush site for the troopers.

Calling in artillery and gunships, the "First Strike" paratroopers blocked escape routes. As the NVA fled the bombardment, the infantrymen ripped into the enemy with withering fire. When the battle ended, 72 enemy bodies lay in front of the paratroopers' positions.

With the offensive blunted near Saigon, the 1st Brigade was airlifted to I Corps. In two weeks, the troopers had cleared the route following Highway 547 to the A Shau Valley. A firebase, Birmingham, was established 16 km from the NVA stronghold, to support the driving paratroopers, who continued to push westward through the mountains. Enemy supply routes were cut, troop movements were interrupted, and arms caches were uncovered by the onrushing troopers.

Operation Jeb Stuart ended with the TET lunar offensive nullified. In 40 days of bitter fighting over 1000 of the infiltrating NVA and VC were killed. Battles along Highway 1 and the "Street without Joy" became mourning grounds for the 812th NVA Regiment and the 324th NVA Division.

LRRP<sub>s</sub>

The greenclad figures flit from the trembling Huey, then quickly dissolve into the foliage. For five days the men and the jungle are one, and there is opposition to the enemy in the triple-canopied tangles that protect the communist mountain sanctuaries.

Probably no screaming Eagles are more hated by the NVA and VC than the LRRP infantrymen. The silent searchers spring quick, lethal ambushes on small enemy forces, and when confronted by larger enemy groups, simply sit quiet, or call in artillery and air strikes, or the giant guns of the New Jersey. They pinpoint communist base camps, supply depots, infiltration routes, and troop movements. And most galling to the NVA and VC, they have become masters of the quiet, shadow war pioneered by the enemy.

The small LRRP teams are elite units, with much more freedom and responsibility than the infantrymen of company size units. But because they are essentially recon, they are almost always outnumbered, and they know that if they are detected and surrounded, their lives are no more than candles in a gale.

Yet the LRRP team is not alone. The PRC25 strapped on the radioman's back contains howitzer batteries, Phantom jets, cobra gunships and quick reaction troops waiting in reserve.

And because they are few and well-trained, they have another ally—a friend that is usually considered by others to be the most hostile of enemies—the jungle.

LRRP<sub>s</sub>

LRRP's

Brothers In Battle

Throughout history, the United States fighting man has served side by side with soldiers of many countries.

The conflict in the Republic of Vietnam finds yet another ally at our side. . . The Vietnamese soldier.

Since the start of the war, our men have conducted all major operations with the Vietnamese. Today, nearly all major operations are joint operations. So successful have these combined forces been that major American field commanders have praised their Vietnamese counterparts as combat equals.

The 1st Division of the Army of the Republic of Vietnam has compiled an especially impressive record, combining with this Division to kill more than 18,000 enemy since February, 1968. The pacification programs of the two Divisions have resulted in more than 30 secure hamlets.

They have pacified Thua Thien province to the extent the Hue-Phu Bai railroad line has become operative after months of labor, providing a large boost to the economy of the area.

Maj. Gen. Ngo Quang Troung, commander of the 1st ARVN Division has worked hand-in-hand with Maj. Gen. O. M. Barsanti and Maj. Gen. Melvin Zais in pursuit of the enemy and pacification of Thua Thien province. With this cooperation among the two Divisions and its leaders, Thua Thien province is now a better place for the Vietnamese families to grow and prosper.

Carentan I

Continuing the fight for the area around Hue, Division Paratroopers teamed with Airborne Infantrymen of the 3rd Brigade, 82nd Abn. Div., to launch Operation Carentan I. The campaign was directed against insurgents in Thua Thien province, north of Camp Eagle, the new forward base camp. It succeeded through a series of cordons and night ambushes.

The initial assault March 8 included "All Americans" from the 82nd, and members of B Trp., 2nd Sqd., 17th Cav., and F Co., 58th Inf. (LRRP). Screaming Eagles from the 2nd Brigade rejoined the Division after participating in Operation Jeb Stuart near Quang Tri City. Two days after the start of Carentan, A Co., 1st Bn., 501st Abn. Inf. uncovered a pair of large weapons caches, while Paratroopers from C Co., 2nd Bn., 501st Abn. Inf. killed 25 enemy in a contact with an NVA company.

Before the end of Carentan's first week, C Co. had killed 41 more enemy in a two-day battle three miles north of Hue. Meanwhile, Screaming Eagles from the 1st Brigade's 2nd Bn., 327th Abn. Inf., charged with the responsibility of clearing Route 547 from Hue to Fire Base Bastogne, killed 25 enemy soldiers, who were fighting from bunker positions along the road.

Late in the evening of March 21, members of the 2nd Bn., 501st Abn. Inf. repulsed an attack on their night defensive position, sometimes resorting to direct artillery fire to kill 22 enemy. The next day, gunships of the 101st Avn. Bn. caught an NVA company in the open five miles west of Hue and killed 34, while a light fire team destroyed three sampans, resulting in nine more enemy deaths.

Sweeps by the 1st Bn., 501st Abn. Inf. accounted for 57 enemy killed in two days of fighting, while D Co., 2nd Bn., 501st Abn. Inf. found 31 NVA killed in previous fighting in their area of operation.

When the operation ended March 31, 861 enemy had been killed. Weapons and munitions captured included 186 individual and crew-served weapons, 1,027 rocket, mortar and artillery rounds, 41,000 small arms rounds and 45 grenades. Paratroopers also kept nearly 17 tons of rice and grain from the enemy.

Carentan II

Carentan I terminated on March 31, with the launching of Operation Carentan II. The new operation was conducted in the same area, northwest from the coastal plains; south from Hue; due west to the A Shau Valley.

Operation Carentan II proved to be a testing point for the Screaming Eagles. North Vietnamese regulars challenged Paratrooper forces almost daily. The normal tactic of hit and run was absent from the enemy's fighting strategy. The Screaming Eagles passed their test defeating the enemy on every front in every encounter. The Screaming Eagles earned a reputation among the enemy units. Those who wear the Eagle on their shoulder were to be avoided.

The mission of Carentan II was to continue driving hostile forces from the area around Hue, and to begin clearing operations toward the A Shau Valley for a possible future raid into that area. The first major battle occurred on the famous "Street without Joy." The 2nd Squadron, 17th Airborne Cavalry began sweeping the area destroying bunker complexes and other fortifications that had long been NVA strongholds. Assisting in the "Street" sweep were 2nd Brigade troopers from the 2nd Bn., 501st Abn. Inf. A sweep of the Phong Dien village after a night cordon and artillery bombardment resulted in 66 enemy dead.

During the same period, other 2nd Brigade troopers were completing a week-long reconnaissance-in-force along the Song Bo River, three miles northwest of Hue. Army aviation, artillery, tactical air, and the airborne troopers combined to kill 200 enemy and capture 44 weapons.

Another cordon operation around the village of Dong Xuyen, three miles north of Hue, netted paratroopers from the 1st Bn., 501st Abn. Inf., 53 enemy killed in three days of bitter fighting.

Battle Of Phuoc Yen

Screaming Eagles terminated Operation Carentan II on May 17. The paratrooper forces killed 2,100 NVA, captured 157 prisoners and 581 enemy weapons during the 47 day operation around Hue. "Relieve the pressure from the area around Hue," was their standing order and the Airborne infantrymen did just that as their highly mobile fighting units continually maintained pressure on the enemy and discouraged any future attack of the old Imperial City.

As a prelude to Phuoc Yen, the classic cordon operation of the Vietnam war, paratroopers from the 2nd Bn., 501st Abn. Inf. followed two Viet Cong into the village of Thon Kim Doi. An NVA company was waiting for the onrushing Screaming Eagles.

Immediately the village was sealed off allowing artillery and air strikes to pound the enemy force. The first day yielded 21 enemy bodies. Illumination continued through the night as the trapped enemy unit tried to exfiltrate the village. The following day found airborne riflemen firing into the village while air strikes and artillery continued to batter the remaining NVA. The day's results were 47 NVA killed. The final day saw the 2nd Brigade troopers sweeping the village and raising the total body count to 95.

The tactic of cordoning a village continued to develop through the 2nd Brigade and the coastal plains operations. The concept consists of keeping the companies in constant sweeping motions and still within striking distance of each other. Then when a lucrative target is found artillery and air strikes contain the enemy until additional airborne units are airlifted to the area sealing off any possible escape routes. The classic cordon of the Vietnam war occurred on April 28, around the village of Phuoc Yen.

The Phuoc Yen battle began with units from the 2nd Brigade trapping the 8th Bn, 90th NVA Reg in the stocking area of the Song Bo River, 2 miles northwest of Hue. For four days, companies from three 2nd Brigade battalions, plus local Popular Forces (PFs), and the "Black Panther" Company of the 1st ARVN Division, lay siege to the stocking shaped village complex that intelligence sources said was harbouring an NVA battalion.

The paratroopers were joined by the batteries of the 21st Artillery, helicopter gunships, and Air Force fighter-bombers. By morning of the fifth day, the NVA body count reached 419, and another 107 became the largest NVA force to surrender en masse to an American unit in the history of the war.

Delaware

In what was termed "one of the 101st's toughest missions in Vietnam," Operation Delaware was initiated by troopers of the 1st Brigade on April 19. The primary mission of Delaware was to provide a blocking force for the 1st Air Cavalry assault into the A Shau Valley and to interdict enemy supply routes along Highway 547 and 547A leading out of the valley toward Hue. The Brigade, with the 3rd ARVN Airborne Task Force, was to operate in the Rao Nho and Rao Nai valleys to establish Firebase (FB) Veghel.

On April 23, the 1st Bn., 327th Abn. Inf. continued their clearing operations at Veghel, six miles east of the A Shau Valley. Scattered resistance was met as the paratroopers prepared the LZ for insertion of heavy engineer equipment and artillery pieces.

Company C, 2nd Bn., 327th Abn. Inf. engaged two NVA companies along route 547, 15 miles southwest of Hue on April 25. The battalion's Co. A moved to assist while Co. C maintained contact. The surprised NVA left their positions under a deadly hail of fire as the paratroopers flanked the fortifications. Thirty-two Communists were killed and seven weapons captured when the battle subsided.

Operation Delaware concluded on May 17. The 1st Brigade units had killed 318 NVA and captured three prisoners and 121 weapons during the 28 day operation. The Brigade also succeeded in interdicting route 547, completely cutting off its use as a resupply route by enemy forces.

SERTS

There are no ivy-covered walls and the atmosphere on "campus" is hardly intellectual, but few schools are held in higher esteem among Division Paratroopers.

For every lieutenant and junior enlisted man in the 101st, the first stop after joining the Division is the Screaming Eagle Replacement Training School at Bien Hoa. The curriculum consists of only one course which lasts five days, but four years of college could not be as important to the education of any combat soldier. Lessons learned at SERTS have saved many lives.

Besides providing a transition period to adjust to a tropical combat zone, the school offers refresher instruction in virtually every subject covered in Basic Combat Training—with specific application to the Division's area of operations.

Troopers who have never handled an M-16 or an M-60 soon regard them as old friends when they realize they are the surest tickets to a freedom bird 12 months away. Training day and night under the watchful eyes of handpicked, combat-experienced NCOs, the replacements become familiar with virtually every weapon in the Army's Vietnam arsenal—as well as Charlie's.

A realistic enemy village and jungle trail acquaint new Eagles with the mines and booby traps they will strive to avoid for a year. Reaction courses, guard duty, classes in first aid and field sanitation and, sometimes, an unscheduled mortar attack, all serve to prepare young Paratroopers for the months ahead in I Corps.

By the time a replacement graduates from the rigors of Camp Ray, a gain in confidence will accompany his improved physical condition. The last day of the course often includes a patrol outside the perimeter, but by now, a young Eagle could not be more ready to meet his enemy.

Nevada Eagle

With the beginning of Operation Nevada Eagle on May 17, the Screaming Eagles of the 1st and 2nd Brigades had a new mission. The VC and NVA in the area badly needed the rice from the upcoming harvest. Working in coordination with the district chiefs, the brigades protected the villagers as they harvested their spring rice.

The first significant combat action of Nevada Eagle occurred on May 21 when the 2nd Bn., 327th Abn. Inf. repulsed a probe of their night defensive perimeter with artillery and small arms. Thirty-one enemy dead and 12 weapons littered the perimeter the next morning.

Late in May the first of a series of huge weapons and equipment caches was unearthed deep in the triple canopy jungles west of Hue. The 1st Bn., 327th Abn. Inf. uncovered three light artillery pieces, two anti-aircraft guns and one truck near FB Veghel. Three days later, the largest cache of Nevada Eagle was discovered 12 miles southwest of Hue by the 2nd Bn., 327th Abn. Inf. More than 230 individual and crew-served weapons were pulled from well-prepared storage bunkers dug into the jungle floor camouflaged with several feet of thick, overgrown brush.

During the same period the 1st Bn. 327th Abn. Inf. was again uncovering enemy caches. In a cache 3 miles southwest of FB Veghel, a fleet of 54 enemy trucks was discovered and destroyed in place.

For the 2nd Brigade, Nevada Eagle saw more cordon operations used throughout the coastal plains area. Helicopter assaults became the Communist nemesis. Coordinated operations involving air, land, sea, and Vietnamese-American efforts helped add to the overall effectiveness of the operation.

At 12:30 a.m. on May 21, an NVA battalion, augmented by personnel from a sapper demolition team, launched a daring ground attack against Camp Eagle, following a covering barrage of more than 400 rounds of 122mm rockets, 82mm mortars, B-40 and B-41 rocket-grenades into the Division headquarters area. The ground attack struck the southwest edge of the perimeter and was beaten back by headquarters troops of the 1st Brigade, members of the 2nd Bn., 502nd Abn. Inf. and helicopter gunships.

At dawn a sweep of the area revealed 54 enemy bodies and 16 individual weapons captured. Also seized were 40 satchel charges, 30 bangalore torpedoes, and 50 RPG rounds. Damage to the base area was light.

Rice denial dominated the actions of Nevada Eagle during the lull in enemy contact. For the period covering May 17 to July 18, Screaming Eagle units from the 1st and 2nd Brigades captured over 325 tons of enemy-held rice.

In mid-July, the Division welcomed a new commander, Maj. Gen. Melvin Zais. "Lucky Eagle" shared his thoughts with his troops when he told them, "My mission as your Division commander is twofold: First, I came here to fight; second, I have a grave responsibility to take care of you."

In their new airmobile role, the Screaming Eagles exercised their new wings with a combat assault by 2/502nd and 2/327th into the Ashau Valley, the North Vietnamese stronghold west of Hue. Designed to cut off supply routes from the west, the operation began with an airlift of two battalions from the 1st Brigade. The next day two battalions of the 1st ARVN Division air-assaulted into the area secured by the 2nd Bn., 327th Abn. Inf. near Ta Bat airfield.

The Paratroopers met scattered contact throughout the operation. Two bitter tastes of allied power first by the ARVN units and then by the 1st Bn., 327th Abn. Inf. discouraged any future contacts. The NVA who had not fled the area were forced to de-escalate to small harassing attacks on the bordering fire bases with mortar and artillery fire.

On August 21, the allied troops were airlifted from the valley floor. During the 17 day operation, 181 NVA were killed and four taken prisoner. The Screaming Eagles also captured 58 individual and crew-served weapons.

As the paratroopers left the picturesque valley, the NVA sanctuary was a shambles. Base camps were destroyed, roads obliterated and caches uncovered. The remaining NVA were left in a valley ringed with artillery and littered with mine fields to discourage its future tactical value.

Withdrawing from their thrust into the A Shau Valley, the Screaming Eagles concentrated their efforts refining their already famous cordon tactics into a new concept. The previous tactic included extensive artillery preparation followed by air strikes. While this procedure eliminated much of the hostile fire power, it also meant considerable damage to the inclosed terrain and structures.

Under the new concept, a minimum of artillery and air power was to be used. In its place, tight encirclements and surprise tactics were employed to trap any enemy elements in the suspected area. A prime example of this new concept was the operation around Vinh Loc district.

A superb example of careful prior planning and close coordination between allied units, the battle of Vinh Loc lasted 10 days. During that time 153 enemy were killed, 178 individual and crew-served weapons captured and 370 prisoners taken, of which 126 were identified as members of the local Viet Cong infrastructure. In addition, 56 Hoi Chanhs rallied to the South Vietnamese Government and 139 enemy soldiers volunteered for the ARVN forces.

Immediately following the close of the operation, two Vietnamese revolutionary development teams moved into Vinh Loc district to help the people resettle. Since then, Regional and Popular Forces have been assigned to protect the district and its people.

Following the operation in Vinh Loc district, the Division carried it fight to all fields with an aggressive Chieu Hoi program, coupled with extensive civil affairs projects.

The Division's lone southern brigade rejoined the Screaming Eagles in I Corps. They soon deployed to Camp Evans as the 1st Air Cavalry Division moved south to another area.

With all the Screaming Eagles fighting together for the first time in the same operation, enemy units continued to avoid contact with the searching paratroopers. The lull in fighting aided units in continuing their civil affairs projects and the PsyOps effort.

The increased emphasis in the Hoi Chanh program brought the Screaming Eagle teams 231 ralliers during the month of September and a record of 251 ralliers in October.

Operation Nevada Eagle ended Feb. 28, 1969. The Division accounted for 3,299 enemy killed 798 VC and 55 NVA prisoners, and 3,702 weapons captured.

More than 667 tons of rice was seized. succeeding Nevada Eagle is Operation Kentucky Jumper, which leaped off with another Screaming Eagle thrust into the A Shaw Valley, Coded Massachusetts Striken.

Battle Of Nui Ke Mountain

The All Americans of the 82nd Airborne Division's 43rd Brigade, under the operational control of the 101st, withdrew from their static security role to overrun the 5th NVA Regimental Headquarters nestled in the jungle-sheathed mountains 15 miles southwest of Hue.

A rallier from the 43rd Observer Co., 5th NVA Regt., supplied the necessary information for a successful combat assault that took no friendly casualties. Tight security ringed the planning stages of the operation. Artillery preparations were halted one week prior to the operation. Aerial reconnaissance missions over the area were also curtailed during the days preceding the assault. To further tighten the secrecy, the command CP was not to be moved to FB Brick until the day of the operation.

Exploiting information received from the rallier, 1st Bn., 508th Abn. Inf., was air-assaulted to the pre-planned landing zones. Simultaneously, the attack command post and supporting artillery were flown to FB Brick to begin their supporting role.

The first heavy contact came on the second day of the operation when a platoon from Co. B overran a deserted enemy base camp. So surprised were the former occupants that they left their noon meal simmering in cooking pots. The platoon leader sent a recon squad downstream from his position to investigate a possible enemy hiding spot. The squad immediately came under intense fire from a concentration of enemy automatic weapons. The remainder of the platoon maneuvered to develop the contact. The platoon leader quickly employed LAWs and M-79 fire. Then he gave the order to fix bayonets and charged the enemy's position. The element of surprise belonged to the Airborne as they overran the hostile position, killing 13 NVA regulars.

On the morning of the 26th, Bravo Company made contact with an estimated platoon. The paratroopers maintained pressure on the enemy unit as the NVA employed their delaying tactics of previous contacts. As the airborne infantrymen continued their pursuit, they came under heavy automatic weapons, B-40, and RPG-7 fire from an estimated enemy platoon. The friendly elements pulled back to allow air strikes to soften the area.

Battle Of Nui Ke

The second platoon was sent east in a flanking movement on the entrenched enemy. The third and fourth platoons surged forward again, this time coming in contact with an estimated NVA company. The Airborne company was now receiving heavy enemy fire which limited movement in any direction. The company commander then directed his second platoon to move to a flanking position and had the remainder of the company fix bayonets for a frontal assault.

On command, the second platoon charged the enemy from the flank, while the third and fourth platoons charged from the front. The element of surprise again prevailed as the Paratroopers swept over the enemy position leaving 92 enemy bodies in their wake.

Following the Airborne bayonet assaults, the 508th troopers continued to search the area and ransack enemy bunker complexes for ammunition and weapons caches. After 11 days of heavy fighting, the total enemy body count for the All Americans stood at 189. Also three prisoners were taken, as well as 685 individual and 46 crew-served weapons. In addition searches of the base camps resulted in the following captured material: 5824 mortar rounds; 306,050 rounds of small arms ammunition; 129 mines; 21 radios; 352 gas masks; 761 grenades; and 15½ tons of rice.

Soon after the Nui Ke operation, the 3rd Bde, 82nd Airborne Division left the operational control of the 101st, and moved to III Corps to begin fighting as a separate brigade, Maj. Gen. Melvin Zais, praising the performance of the All-Americans, said, "They performed magnificently. I consider it a privilege to have had them under my command."

VIPs

A year in the boonies makes it tough for a trooper to keep up with his favorite television shows and sports events. But Screaming Eagles had their share of well-known visitors, as Division base camps and fire bases played host to a variety of celebrities on handshaking tours.

Paratroopers had opportunities to shake hands with Joey Bishop, get their pictures taken with Jimmy Stewart and chat with Johnny Grant and his flock of Hollywood starlets. Actress Tippi Hedren had a warm smile for many an exhausted Infantryman, and Vietnam veteran Martha Raye kept dozens of combat-weary troopers laughing.

When business was the nature of the visit, Eagle artillery boomed a welcome for Generals Willam Westmoreland and Creighton Abrams. Bringing news for the sports-minded were baseball players Ernie Banks, Ron Swoboda and Pete Richert, football coaches Woody Hayes and Bill Hess, and prizefighters Carlos Ortiz and Sandy Saddler.

Between the goodwill tours, dozens of musical groups sent by the USO made appearances at forward bases, keeping paratroopers entertained on a rare evening off. Showing that the visiting performers ranked next in importance only to a letter from home and a cold soda, Screaming Eagles responded by constructing new temporary theatres throughout the area of operations.

III Corps Fighting

The Wandering Warriors of the 101st Airborne Division's 3rd Brigade finally returned home to stay on October 2, 1968.

Rain fell in a soft drizzle as a C-130 aircraft settled to the airstrip at Hue-Phu Bai and the Screaming Eagle band struck up "Rendezvous with Destiny." Command elements of the brigade headquarters and their direct artillery support battalion, the 2d Bn., 319th Arty., moved toward Major General Melvin Zais, the division commanding general, halted, and the tall, slender colonel leading the formation saluted and said, "Sir, the 3rd Brigade reports for duty."

With this message, Col. Joseph B. Conmy Jr., commanding officer of the 3rd Brigade, 101st Airborne Division reunited his brigade with the Division from which it had been separated since February.

As the new base camp was under construction, the maneuver battalions moved out to begin familiarizing themselves with their new AO (area of operations).

It was all old hat to the wanderers, who had seen action in all four tactical zones. Such names as Bien Hoa, Phuoc Vinh, Song Be, Dak To, Dak Pek, Cu Chi, and Dau Tieng are all familiar. Each has seen elements of, if not the entire brigade, fighting on its terrain.

When the Warriors arrived at Bien Hoa Air Base in December, 1967, under the command of Col. Lawrence Mowery, the first move was made to Phuoc Vinh. In-country training began and quickly turned into full scale combat against the Viet Cong located in the edge of War Zone D and south of Phuoc Vinh.

The young Paratroopers gained confidence and battle savvy; they became Warriors who were to wander and fight throughout Vietnam.

As the first sounds of gunfire of the Tet Offensive broke over the sprawling Bien Hoa complex, the 2nd Bn., 506th Abn. Inf. was loaded on helicopters to be set down to the rear of the 101st Division headquarters. Fifty meters beyond the headquarters, the first enemy contact was made and 36 hours of persistent fighting began which resulted in over 150 enemy deaths. The title "Warriors" was earned.

III Corps Fighting

The 1st Bn., 506th Abn. Inf. had their first extensive contact in a vicious battle at Song Be, 60 miles north of Bien Hoa, near the Cambodian border. Paratroopers of this battalion were tested—and proven as they dealt the enemy a severe blow.

Rakkasans from the 3rd Bn., 187th Abn. Inf. made first contact by destroying a regimental base camp near Dong Nai River south of Phuoc Vinh killing more than 120 enemy.

The Brigade, now weaned in battle, was ready to wander. Placed under operational control of II Field Forces when the remainder of the Division moved to I Corps, it became the first brigade sent where the action was. In that capacity, company-sized elements fought south of Saigon with the 9th Infantry Division in the IV Corps Delta region.

In May, the brigade moved to Dak To in the Central Highlands of II Corps to join the 4th Infantry Division. The "Wandering" segment of the brigade nickname was beginning to form.

At 2 a.m., 10 days after arriving at Dak To, the Fire Brigade was loaded aboard Air Force C7A aircraft for flight to relieve the surrounded Special Forces camp at Dak Pek. Arrival and dispersion to the fire bases on the high mountain tops around Dak Pek coupled with extensive B-52 strikes within 1500 meters of the perimeter, silenced the NVA threat. Again, the paratroopers loaded up to return to Dak To.

June's first week brought intelligence reports that the enemy had left the mountainous, triple-canopied area. So word to move came again to return to Phuoc Vinh.

Equipment not yet unloaded, word came to the Wanderers, "... move to Cu Chi to join the 25th Infantry Division."

Operation Toan Thang (Complete Victory), Phase II, opened for the brigade June 13 with immediate contact with NVA regulars. Neither the new foe nor the new rice paddy and hedgerow terrain hampered the 3rd Brigade troopers.

Wandering was again the word as the brigade soon moved on to Dau Tieng and spread out through the surrounding rubber plantation to fight the NVA and VC forces in small, vicious firefights before returning to Cu Chi.

Towns in the Cu Chi area that had been VC-controlled for years came to recognize the Screaming Eagle patch. Combat assaults and cordon missions made the villages of Go Dau Ha, Trang Bang, and Trung Lap aware that the "White chicken men with black rifles" would come at a moment's notice in their flock of helicopters. As a result, the infiltrators from Cambodia toward Saigon soon discovered paths blocked and supply routes and food caches discovered and destroyed.

Word for the move via Phuoc Vinh to rejoin the division came just as the brigade terminated three months around Cu Chi. The Fire Brigade was to replace the 82nd Airborne Division's 3rd Brigade and return home to the Division in I Corps.

Just beginning to settle in at Camp Eagle and to learn the AO, the call came for yet another move, their 12th for the fighting third. This time the move was to Camp Evans, north of Hue, the former home of the camp and a division-sized AO which included the "Street without Joy."

The battle-hardened warriors had wandered one more time; with the same fixed purpose as before—to destroy the enemy. In its first year in country, the brigade killed 1987 enemy, captured 62 prisoners, 375 detainees, 293 individual and 138 crew-served weapons, and 282,285 pounds of rice.

The Wandering Warriors of the 3rd Brigade have traveled from south of Saigon to the DMZ. As Col. Conmy said, "I reported to General Zais that we were ready for combat when we arrived. We have proven we can move and above all, we have proven we can fight; either one at a moment's notice."

The colonel's words echoed the motto adopted by the brigade—"Ready to move and ready to fight." They have done both well.

WORLD WAR II RECEIPIENTS

LTC Robert Cole

PFC Joe E. Mann

SSG Joe R. Hooper

On March 7, 1969 Staff Sergeant Joe R. Hooper received the Medal for his actions near Hue while a squad leader with Co. D, 2nd Bn., 501st Abn., Inf. On February 21, 1968 Sgt. Hooper's unit was assaulting a well armed enemy position and was engaged by heavy rocket and automatic weapons fire. Hooper destroyed several bunkers then turned to help the wounded, removing them to safety. He was seriously wounded, but refused medical aid and returned to his men. Hooper then destroyed three enemy bunkers and killed two enemy soldiers. He destroyed four more buildings housing the enemy and killed an NVA Officer. Although his wound was compounded by grenade fragments, Hooper gathered more grenades and charged a line of bunkers, destroying them as he ran by, and killed an enemy soldier and three more NVA officers in close combat. He reorganized his unit, choosing not to be evacuated for treatment until the next morning.

VIETNAM RECEIPIENTS

LT. James A. Gardner

On October 19, 1968, the Medal of Honor was presented to Mrs. Joella Gardner Rosler of Clarksville, Tenn., for her former husband's "conspicuous gallantry and intrepidity in action . . ." on February 7, 1966. While a platoon leader with the 1st Bn., 327th Abn., Inf., 1st Lt. James A. Gardner led his platoon against heavily armed and well dug in enemy bunker positions in the village of My Canh. Lt. Gardner ran from bunker to bunker throwing grenades and firing his rifle. As he approached the fourth enemy position, he was severely wounded, but continued the attack, destroying two more of the bunkers and inspiring his men to rout the enemy.

Departure

They came down from the north, quiet and determined Screaming Eagle warriors returning home. Behind them are the battlefields without names and the towns with names no one can pronounce. Behind them are the dust and the rain and the heat and the cold.

They arrive at the 101st Airborne Division Replacement Co. in a mood of cautious optimism. All year they have seen others leave. Their eyes have occasionally caught a glimpse of a homeward bound commercial airliner.

Still, they know records can get misplaced, exotic diseases can keep them in quarantine, the rear does get rocketed, airplanes do crash. Going home is important, and even the remotest threat is not taken lightly.

Replacement Co. is a pleasant surprise. Out-processing is done quickly and efficiently by clerks who smile and treat each Paratrooper with the respect he has earned.

Harassment doesn't exist. The few days of waiting are spent having uniforms cleaned, acquiring needed insignia and ribbons, clearing war souvenirs for the trip home, getting haircuts . . . and talking.

At night, there are the luxuries of movies and clubs and showers and PX's . . . and there is more talk.

Conversation is strange. It is not the amiable conversation of civilians or the rough good-natured banter of soldiers. Instead, there is a series of individual dialogues, near soliloquies lost in the silence of deep thought.

Subjects for discussion are limited. Talk of home is confused, excited and a little apprehensive. A lot changes in a year, and no one ignores the fact he is going home a partial stranger. Everyone wonders about the changes and how he will adjust.

Departure

Talk of the war is limited. Men speak of friends and good times. They discuss the war as a political issue; combat and death are forbidden topics.

One soldier learned to appreciate things. "Simple things," he said, "like a floor or a bed or three square meals a day. Things I knew I was lucky to have... I never knew how lucky though."

Another Screaming Eagle found out what it means to carry responsibility. "Before, there was always someone backing me up. Over here, if you don't do your job, someone gets hurt. It makes a big difference."

"You can't be selfish here," said one trooper. "Other people are too important. If you are going to make it, you'd better take care of your buddy. You need him awfully bad."

Some men learned about the Vietnamese. "I was fortunate enough to work with them on many occasions. At first, I thought they were inscrutable Orientals," smiled one man. "Then I saw that they were people just like back in the states. They're trying to raise their families and send their kids to school and get better jobs. Some things are pretty universal. I really hope things work out all right for these people."

More than one man came to know his God better. "A year makes you realize there is more to living than having a good time," one soldier said.

The plane tickets usually arrive on the fourth day. It's the end of the waiting. The baggage is on the bus, and everyone is sitting on the benches of the outdoor theater. The Division comes to say good-bye.

A senior officer appears on the stage, and his voice is filled with pride as he tells them what they already know but need to hear. He tells them of the courage they have shown and the hardships they have endured. He talks about the terror and the boredom, the seven days a week they worked and the job they did.

Then it's over. The band switches from martial music to "California Here I Come." The buses are loaded and start to pull away.

And then it is there, through the bus windows, thumbs up. The eternal, cocky, confident thumbs up that came before and after the worst of them—A Shau, Cu Chi, Song Be, Quang Tri, Hai Lang, Phuoc Yen, Phuoc Vinh. The thumbs up that has always been and always will be there as long as there are Screaming Eagles.

*Then said Martha unto Jesus, Lord, if thou hadst

—John 11:21
