ANNEX H

REFERENCE SOURCES

(U) The annex was prepared to assist personnel doing research on activities in Southeast Asia (SEA). It is a pioneer attempt at listing "caches" of reference sources which are considered to be of significance to serious researchers and historians. It is hoped that this listing will lead to finding other "caches." If so, this annex will be updated and redistributed during the year. Contributions and suggestions are encouraged.

(U) Most of the printed documents are widely circulated and it is considered unnecessary to reproduce the voluminous distribution lists. Figure H-1 provides a listing of the documents and shows key reference centers which are on the distribution lists.

Air Operations

(U) Air operations in SEA are well documented in written reports and in data from automated sources.

CHECO Reports

(U) The largest contributor of written reports is Contemporary Historical Examination of Current Operations (CHECO), a division of the Directorate of Tactical Analysis of the 7th Air Force (7AF). The CHECO reports are written in the field, staffed by 7AF Headquarters, and published by the Pacific Air Forces (PACAF).

(U) CHECO is the oldest continuing USAF function in SEA and dates back to 1962. The basic approach to most studies is to document how an operation was conceived, how it is executed, and whether or not it succeeds. After the draft report is written, all supporting documents are microfilmed and kept as a package. By the end of 1970, CHECO had over 1 1/2 million pages of documents concerning operations in SEA.

(U) Although the reports focus on close air support and interdiction, there are reports on numerous subjects. Reports are distributed to every wing and air division in the USAF, all service headquarters, service schools, all unified commands, and to the Secretary of Defense. (1)

(U) Following is a listing of CHECO Reports.

Data From Automated Sources

(U) In addition to the JCS automated data on air operations (see Figure H-2), data is available from the 7AF Automated Command and Control System. The Southeast Asia Data Base (SEADAB) was developed to provide an automated mode for consolidating reported air activity in SEA. The data is extracted from reports submitted by operational units in response to requirements established by PACAFM 55-3 and supplemented by 7AF directives. (2) Specific items in the data base include:

Item	Description
1. Date	- retrievals are based on activity for a calendar day
2. Mission Number	- fraged mission number of attack sorties
3. Service	- out-country (USA F/USN*/USMC) in-country (USA F/VNAF/RAAF)
4. Launch Base	- mission departure base
5. Unit	- parent organization of mission aircraft
6. Mission Call Sign	- fraged flight name
7. Aircraft Type	- model/design
8. Number fraged	- number of aircraft on mission
9. Mission Function Fraged	- type mission, e.g., Strike, Escort

* Effective 1 Nov 69

| 10. Route Package Fragged | -corps/zone/route package |
| 11. TOT Fragged | -time over target (Z or local) |
| 12. Country Flown | -in/out country mission identifier |
| 13. Flown Data | -actual number of aircraft flown on mission, type mission function flown, route package, flying time. |
| 14. TOT | -last time over target (Z or local) |
| 15. Day/Night Mission | -self explanatory |
| 16. Special Code | -special operations identifier, e.g., COMMANDO BOLT, COMBAT SKYSPOT |
| 17. Mission Deviation | -type diversion and cause, e.g., air abort, cancellation, weather, directed by higher headquarters |

| 19. Target Data | -coordinates, ordnance expended (number/type), and bomb damage assessment (number/target type/results) |
| | NOTE: Approximately 48 hours after mission termination, FAC reported BDA is used to update only reported BDA for out-country missions only. |
| 20. Aircraft Loss/Damage | -type aircraft, unit, type loss/damage (combat/operational), cause, hit/down location, crew status, etc. |

(11) All information in SEADAB is retrievable; however, most information is extracted through about 70 programs which retrieve the most frequently requested data. Requests for data not retrieved by existing programs must allow for the necessary computer program development time. The time required is dependent upon the availability of programmer resources and the complexity of the requirement. Variations in the information retrieved by the computer programs can be selectively controlled by using separate parameters in the following areas: (3)

Item	Description
1. Time Period	-desired time span in calendar days

UNCLASSIFIED

- | | |

| 2. Mission Function | -approximately 80 type mission types are identifiable, e.g., FAC, Close Air Support, CAP, etc. |
| 3. Route Package | -missions flown in selected route packages/zones or corps |
| 4. Aircraft Type | -by model/design |
| 5. Unit | -by selected units |
| 6. Launch Base | -by selected bases |
| 7. Day/Night | -sorties flown day or night |
| 8. Selected Coordinates | -activity within specified points of latitude/longitude (see note). |
| 9. Special Operations | -missions identified in support of special projects, e.g., COMMANDO BOLT |
| 10. Country Flown | -missions flown in or out country |
| 11. Ordnance | -expenditure of specific types of ordnance |

NOTE: When data is to be requested for a geographical area other than corps or route package, the requestor must provide coordinates of opposite corners of the area to be searched; i.e., northwest and southeast, or northeast and southwest. The program will then compute a north-south, east-west oriented box to be searched, as illustrated below:

Ground Operations

Navy Operations

Navy Research and Development Unit, Vietnam Reports

(U) Abstracts of reports on naval research, development, test, and evaluation activities are published semiannually by the US Navy Research and Development Unit, Vietnam (NRDU-V).

(U) The NRDU-V was established in August 1965 as the naval component of the Joint Research and Test Activity (JRATA). With the establishment of component commands in RVN it was deemed more appropriate for test units to be managed and controlled by their respective services. On 15 Nov 66 the Secretary of Defense, on recommendations of COMUSMACV and CINCPAC, abolished JRATA and NRDU-V became a unit of COMNAVFORV.

The YO-3A "Quiet Airplane" resembles a World War II P-51 Mustang. Tested in RVN as a night visual reconnaissance aircraft, it has thin wings from a popular civilian glider, a sophisticated muffler system, a six-bladed wooden propeller, and "...no extra frills on the... exterior which might make noise in the... wind."

(U) The NRDU-V research, development, test, and evaluation program is based on requirements generated by US Navy and US Marine Corps forces operating in RVN. NRDU-V projects can generally be classified as follows:

1. Projects initiated under the Vietnam Laboratory Assistance Program and for which assistance from the various Navy laboratories is required.
2. Evaluation of Navy-developed equipment other than the Vietnam Laboratory Assistance Program generated equipment.
3. Evaluation of equipment which has been developed by other services and has Navy applications.
4. Evaluation of equipment designed and constructed using in-country resources.

(U) NRDU-V reports are not widely distributed and only a small number of addressees receive all reports. The White Oak Naval Ordnance Laboratory, Silver Springs, Md. 20910, probably has the most complete set of reports in CONUS.

(C) NRDU-V groups their projects into 11 categories and lists each as successful or unsuccessful. (5) A listing of projects by number, title, with a brief description and remarks on each project follows:

1. Boats (Hull, Armor and Machinery)

a. Successful

Pacification and Development

(U) The pacification and development area is well documented in written reports and in data from automated sources. The CORDS Information Center in MACV Headquarters contains a wealth of material. Much of the data is automated (see Figure H-5).

(U) The Office of the Chief of Military History, Department of the Army, is currently at work on a multi-volume history of the Army in Vietnam. The volume on pacification is now in the research stage. The author is assembling a comprehensive collection of research documents on all aspects of the subject as reported from Washington to MACV to the district level. The project began in 1969 and is expected to be complete in 5 or 6 years.

Historical Information Management System (HIMS)

(U) In 1970 MACV Data Management Agency developed a program to provide an automated listing of all documents stored in the MACV historical document repository. Called Historical Information Management System (HIMS), it allows quick reference or inquiries into all documents, studies, and correspondence maintained in the files as well as documents which are on microfilm. (8)

(U) The program is still in progress, but the final objective is to automate the catalog of MACV historical documents, allow retrieval of documents by identifiers selected from the catalog, and produce an automated listing of all documents stored in the MACV historical document repository.
