Brief History of the 501st, 502nd and 2nd Brigade (101st ABN DIV)

The 502nd, or "five-oh-deuce", was activated July 1, 1941 at Fort Benning, Georgia as the 502nd parachute infantry battalion, as an experimental unit formed to test the doctrine and tactics of parachute assaults. The 502nd entered combat in World War II on June 6, 1944, by jumping into Normandy, with allied forces landing on D-Day and the Battle of Normandy. Between 1945 and 1964. A major reorganization took place on 3 February 1964, when the 2nd Brigade of the 101st Airborne was activated at Fort Campbell, replacing the 1st Airborne Battle Group, 501st Infantry Regiment. The reorganization from the battle groups to brigades and battalions placed two battalions of the 502nd in different brigades of the 101st.

The 2nd Battalion, 502nd Infantry was in the 1st Brigade with 1-327th and 2-327th Infantry. Which deployed to Vietnam and arrived at Cam Ranh Bay, Vietnam on 29 July 1965, they were commanded by the most notable commander LTC Hank "The Gunfighter" Emerson.

The new 2nd Brigade's original organic battalions were the 1st and 2d Battalions, 501st Infantry, and the 1st Battalion, 502nd Infantry. December 1967 the 501st, 502nd and 2nd Brigade deployed by C-141 aircraft and arrived at Bien Hoa Airbase on 13 December 1967. Over the next five years, Soldiers of the "Ready to Go" Brigade participated in twelve campaigns, compiling of a distinguished combat record as well as an enviable reputation for success in the rehabilitation of a war-torn nation. The Brigade redeployed to Fort Campbell in April 1972.

During this week, in the span of 8 years since the 501st Infantry Regiment, 502nd Infantry Regiment and 2nd Brigade, 101st Airborne Division deployed in support of the Vietnam War the following are from After Action Reports, Staff Duty Logs, and Personal Accounts.

A/2-502 IN, continuing to sweep north toward the top of Hill 882, located two bunkers destroyed by air strikes and several fresh blood trails. The day ended with negative contact with enemy.
- 07 May 1970 Phu Thu sniper team engaged three NVA/VC with a believed result of two NVA/VC killed in action. Hue received eight 122mm rockets resulting in several casualties and one civilian house destroyed. RF forces engaged five to six VC at 777125 with negative results.

- 08 May 1968 2BDE ambushed a position established 6 km north of Hue, along a known enemy LOC, observed 20 NVA moving toward the canal. The platoon from B/1-502 IN allowed the enemy to move well within the killing zone, then violently executed the ambush employing claymore, SA, AW, and M-79s. A first light sweep of the area revealed a total of 17 NVA killed and 6 weapons captured during the night action.
- 08 May 1968 In the jungle four miles north of Hue, paratroopers from B/1-502 IN established an early morning ambush position and killed 17 NVA after two squads of enemy soldiers walked right into the position. There were no paratrooper casualties. Continuing application of their highly successful cordon tactics, airborne infantrymen from the 1-501 IN BN trapped a reinforced NVA company in Phu Luong A village, six miles northwest of Hue. Fifteen enemy were killed in the initial contact. In Delaware action, the paratroopers of C/1-327 IN captured the ninth enemy ammunition cache of the operation. Less than two miles east of Veghel, they found more than 2,000 rounds of 76mm high explosive ammunition, 200 rounds of 76mm smoke ammunition, and 6,300 rounds of 23mm anti-aircraft shells. The cache was stored in bunkers built into a hillside and protected from aerial observation by triple canopy jungle. (Rendezvous with Destiny; Volume 1, Number 2; July 1968)

The Battalion Command Post was located on FSB Airborne. After the initial combat assault of the Bn (-) into LZ Green at YD296017 on 10 May 1969, each of the three assaulting companies moved out to assigned objectives.
- Subsequent RIF operation saw the three maneuvering companies close to objectives in the vicinity of YD284031 and then conducting a battalion size RIF operation toward the northwest. When all elements were clear of their objectives, each company continued to conduct RIF and search and destroy operations within the assigned AO.
- As the AO assigned to the 2-501 IN BN expanded, each company was assigned an area to search. The preponderance of contacts during the entire operation was with small local security forces of 4-5 personnel or with trail watchers. Only two contacts involved larger than squad size elements. The first contact occurred the morning of the 13th of May at FSB Airborne in the vicinity of YD355070. At 0330H, FSB Airborne came under very heavy mortar fire of 82mm, 60mm, and RPG fire. In addition, the area of operation was expanded to include a reconnaissance zone along the Laotian Border and Base Area 607. As the maneuver elements of the 1BDE moved into this area the enemy withdrew to the west into Laos. (HQ, 101st Airborne (Airmobile), Operational Report – Lessons Learned. Dated 20 August 1969)

08 May 1969 C/1-502 IN established contact with 2 enemy snipers resulting in 1 US KIA. At 1200H, Operation MASSACHUSETTS STRIKER closed and 1-502 IN BN became OPCODE to the 1BDE.

The paratroopers of the 1-506 IN BN, 3-187 IN BN, 2-501 IN BN hurriedly prepared their gear, cleaned their weapons, and wrote the letters that they would not have the time to write in the coming days. The following morning, they would be helilifted into the inhospitable A Shau Valley. (Narrative Operation APACHE SNOW; MG John M. Wright Jr. Commanding; 10 May – 7 June 1969)

09 May 1970 A man from B/1-502 IN was medevaced because of a kidney stone passing blood. At location YD900229 the 160th PF platoon found one M60 machinegun and one M1 carbine.

09 May 1970 Operation TEXAS STAR: A/2-502 IN pressed toward the top of Hill 882. An enemy force put at approximately 40 enemy in a bunker complex of 20 to 30 bunkers, engaged the 1st platoon with fragmentation grenades, RPG's and satchel charges. The platoon withdrew and was reinforced by the 2nd platoon. After employing heavily artillery and ARA support, the two platoons again attacked the enemy position. (Rendezvous with Destiny; Volume 3, Number 2; Summer 1970)

10 May 1968 C/1-502 IN made contact with an NVA reinforced platoon 9 km north of Hue. Co C immediately employed heavy volumes of organic weapons fire as the enemy struggled to disengage. Co C maneuvered, pursuing the withdrawing enemy until by mid-morning the NVA platoon was trapped against the Pha Tam Ciang bay. Heavy volumes of artillery and tactical air were employed on the trapped enemy force which, together with the fires from airborne troops, resulted in 21 enemy killed.

10 May 1968 In action five miles north of Hue along Pha Tam Giang inlet, airborne riflemen from C Co., 1st Bn. C/1-502 IN had a running fight with 2 NVA snipers that led into a village where they received heavy fire that killed their point man and prevented his recovery. Air strikes were called in and caused 10 NVA to leave their bunkers and run into Charlie's positions. Results: Friendly: 1 KIA, 1 WIA, and 1 MIA (KIA); Enemy: 11 NVA KIA (BC). D/1-502 IN made contact at 715328 and called for an Air strike. After the strike, a sweep of the area revealed 13 NVA KIA (BC). At 2000, TAC CP received approx. 25 Rounds of 82mm mortar fire from YD582158; engaged with Artillery and mortars. Results: 2 US WHA (Minor).

10 May 1968 Col. Cushman observes an NVA prisoner captured by 2nd Brigade being interrogated pointing at the Eagle Patch of a nearby trooper, and asked the interpreter what he was saying. The interpreter's reply was "He is saying that little bird is real mean" An arch is built over the Brigade TOC with the new Brigade motto: "That Little Bird is Real Mean"

10 May 1969 The 1-502 IN BN continued its normal operations. The only contact occurred when the C+C helicopter received small arms fire at YC6606015 resulting in 4 US WIA. The area was engaged with artillery and ARA. There were negative enemy results.

10 May 1969 Operation APACHE SNOW: XXIV Corps operation, begins with a massive air assault of troops. Sixty-five helicopters lift two Screaming Eagle battalions to two landing zones near the Laotian border within 45 minutes; the rest of the units are in place within four and a half hours. The 3-187 IN makes initial contact with trail watchers near Dong Ap Bia. (Rendezvous with Destiny; Volume 2, Number 1; Summer 1969)

10 May – 07 June 1969 Operation APACHE SNOW: On 10 May, the 3BDE in cooperation with the 1st and 3rd ARVN Regiments and in coordination with the 9th Marine Regiment initiated XXIV Corps Operation – Operation Apache Snow in the northern A Shau Valley. 3BDE employed the 1-506 IN BN, 2-501 IN BN, 3-187 IN BN and TF 3rd Squadron, 5th Cavalry (D/1-506 IN OPCONED). 1st ARVN Regiment employed the 2nd, 3rd, and 4th Battalions, the 3rd ARVN Regiment employed its 1st Battalion. On D-Day the 1-506 IN BN, 3-187 IN BN, 2-501 IN BN, 4-1 ARVN and one company of the 2-1 Arvn conducted multiple battalion assaults along the Laotian borders behind known enemy defenses oriented towards the A Shau Valley. Those assaults and subsequent operations were supported by ten (10) batteries of artillery located in fire bases on the eastern mountains overlooking the Valley.

The 3-1st and 1-3rd ARVN Battalions reinforced those already operating in the vicinity of the Valley. Extensive prepping of the area of operations, with particular emphasis on the flight routes and on the LZ's, by arc lights, TAC air, tube and aerial rocket artillery, and detailed reconnaissance of the LZ's by the air cavalry squadron prior to insertion produced highly professional and successful battalion combat assaults, without incident, into a traditional enemy stronghold. The 3-187 IN BN encountered enemy resistance as did the 1-506 IN BN after insertions. While the resistance against the 1-506 IN BN was quickly eliminated with 12 NVA KIA, the 3-187 IN BN contact grew heavier. The enemy dug-in in fortified bunkers along Dong Ap Bia Bridge (YC3298) maintained determined resistance to repeated assaults by the 3-187 IN BN, and reinforced their positions nightly from Laos. As enemy resistance continued the 2-501 IN BN, 1-506 IN BN and the 2-3 ARVN battalions were employed on all sides of the ridge and on 20 May a coordinated attack against the heavily bunkered ridge resulted in vicious close-in fighting and after a two (2) hour battle, battalion objectives were secured on the ridge complex is currently underway; however, the enemy suffered awesome losses in comparison to his known strength and it is judged from the 454 bodies thus far counted that two battalions of 29th NVA Regiment have been rendered ineffective. Results of the 22 May were: 616 NVA KIA, 2 POW's, 89 IWC, 25 CSWC, and a large assortment of captured ammunition. (DA, Senior Officer Debriefing Report; MG Melvin Zais, CG, 101st ABN DIV; Period 19 July 1968 – 25 May 1969)

10 May – 07 June 1969

Operation APACHE SNOW: Intelligence gained prior to Operation APACHE SNOW indicated that elements of the 6th, 9th, and 29th NVA Regiments were using the Northern A Shau Valley as a primary line of communications for movement of material and infiltration of troops to enemy units throughout I Corps Tactical Zone. The mission given to the 3d Brigade and 1st ARVN Regiment was to conduct airmobile assaults into the Northern A Shau Valley in conjunction with the 9th Marines and 3d ARVN Regiment to destroy the NVA/VC forces, obstruct enemy routes of egress into Laos, interdict enemy lines of communication, and to locate and destroy enemy caches.

Prior to D-Day, the 1st and 3d ARVN Regiments and the 3d Brigade, 101st Airborne Division, constructed three mutually supporting fire bases in and around the Northern A Shau Valley – FB Bradley (YD 278122), FB Airborne (YD 355070), and FB Currahee (YC 399949). On D-Day 10 May, following TAC Air, artillery, and ARA preparations five maneuver battalions (three US – 1-506 (-), 2-502 (-), and 3-187; two ARVN – 2-1 (-), and 4-1) were inserted into five separate landing zones along the Laotian Border in the Northern A Shau Valley. Following the insertion all maneuver battalions initiated reconnaissance in force operations to the east and northeast toward the Valley floor. The insertion of an additional ARVN battalion was accomplished when 2-1 ARVN (-) combat assaulted and secured FB Tiger (YD 253090). The following day 3-1 ARVN Battalion combat assaulted into the Valley to support the other maneuver battalions in their reconnaissance in force operations.

At 111645H, B/3-187 IN began to receive heavy small arms and machine gun fire from the ridges of Hill 937 marking the beginning of the ten-day battle for Dong Ap Bia Mountain. Heavy contact was experienced by the 3-187 Infantry and 1-506 IN BN (redirected to support 3-187 IN BN assault on Hill 937) as both battalions assaulted the heavily fortified enemy positions of Dong Ap Bia. On 19 May, A/2-506 IN was combat assaulted into the Northern A Shau Valley and became OPCON to 3-187 IN BN. The following day 2-3 ARVN BN combat assaulted into the Valley to add additional support to the attack.

With the support of TAC Air, artillery, and ARA throughout the ten-day period, the 3-187 IN BN with A/2-506 IN OPCON, 2-501 IN BN, 1-506 IN BN, and 2-3 ARVN successfully assaulted and drove the 7th and 8th Battalions of the 29th NVA Regiment from their mountain fortress atop Hill 937 on 20 May. The following day 3-187 IN BN became OPCON to the 2BDE and 2-506 IN BN was returned to 3BDE control.

Throughout the period 21 May – 7 June the enemy contact decreased and discoveries of enemy caches increased as enemy elements withdrew from the area into Base Areas in Laos. 2-501 IN BN in conjunction with A/2-17 CAV following the capture of Dong Ap Bia began pursuit operations west to the Laotian Border in order to destroy the remaining defenders of Hill 937. On 22 May, 2-506 IN BN with all elements combat assaulted into FSB Airborne and conducted extensive search and reconnaissance in force operations in and around FSB Airborne to locate NVA Warehouse 54, known to exist in the area.

The 1-506 IN BN, following the capture of Dong AP Bia, conducted extensive search and clear, in addition to reconnaissance in force operations, from Dong Ap Bia south toward FB Currahee, 4-1 ARVN BN moved north and was extracted on 5 June. 2-3 ARVN moved to the south to support 2-327 IN BN in reconnaissance in force operations in the southern A Shau Valley.

This operation was brought to a close on 7 June. The maneuver battalions of the 29th NA Regiment, in addition to its central headquarters with organic and attached technical units, were rendered combat ineffective and forced to withdraw across the border into Laos preventing them from again using the Northern A Shau Valley as a staging and storage area for future operations into I Corps Tactical Zone. The resultant enemy losses were 691 NVA/VC KIA, 5 NVA POW, 241 individual and 40 crew served weapons, and four trucks captured. Friendly losses were 78 US KIA, and 536 US WIA.

Operation MALHEUR II: The 2-502 IN BN conducted an airmobile assault into NORMANDY AO, 20 kilometers to the west of Duc Pho. From 4 LZ's elements began Search and Destroy operations toward the east, discovering many signs of recent enemy activity. In the valleys, there were neat farms and well-tended fields of mountain rice and in the hills, large VC/NVA base camps were discovered, and storage hootches containing food and clothing were hidden in the woods near trails. The enemy appeared to be east of the STRIKE FORCE, and only minor contacts were made until the 15th.

The 1-502 IN BN had light contact during the day, and C/1-502 IN recovered their MIA (KIA) and found 1 NVA KIA (BC)

11 – 12 May 1968

Operation DELAWARE: At 0600H, A/2-502 IN vicinity YD539124 engaged NVA squad along trail with SA. Enemy did not return fire, but yelled and ran around confused, as though trying to surrender; enemy retreated leaving behind 3 NVA KIA and weapons. When A/2-502 IN fired a claymore from its NDP, it heard the enemy fleeing and one individual groaning near the perimeter. At 0800H, TAC CP (2-502 IN BN) receives approx. 18 rounds of incoming 122mm rockets from southeast. Division LRRP's spotted firing location and called gunships on the target. Results: 1 US KIA, 4 US WHA (Minor), 1 Back hoe damaged. At 2330H, the A36 element received an organized probe by an unknown size force. A/2-502 IN requested gunship and during their last pass one or two rockets went astray, wounding 17 friendly personnel in an ambush position approximately 300 meters from the contact area. Operation APACHE SNOW: B/3-187 IN conducted a first light check of the previous day's contact and found numerous blood trails (seven) and three additional bodies, besides one AK-47, one light machinegun, one RPG rocket launcher, and miscellaneous equipment.

Later that day as they maneuvered in the vicinity of the Laotian Border due west of A Loui. B/3-187 IN made contact at 1624 hours with an unidentified size enemy force well entrenched on the ridge line in the vicinity of Hill 937 (YC 327983) (See Sketch). Receiving enemy heavy machinegun, small arms, RPG, and mortar fire the company employed ARA, air strikes, and artillery support in addition to small arms fire which resulted in five NVA killed. These were discovered while the unit was searching the hut and bunker complex. B/3-187 IN lead platoon suffered three killed and nineteen wounded in the contact and was forced to withdraw a short distance to regroup, leaving the wounded where they fell. The company initiated a second advance to retrieve those initially wounded and suffered additional casualties. On the third attempt LTC Honeycutt, the battalion commander, instructed them to increase their volume of fire and push up past the wounded rather than trying to retrieve them under direct enemy fire. This was accomplished at 1645H.

At 1700H during a med-evac for B/3-187 IN, a cobra gunship accompanying the med-evac inadvertently banked and fired six rockets into the 3-187 IN BN command post, D/3-187 IN, and the mortar platoon leaving one killed and thirty-five wounded in its wake. The 3-187 IN BN Commander, S2, S3, and artillery liaison officer were wounded, and all were evacuated except the battalion commander and the S3. By 1900 hours the wounded had been evacuated and the companies began establishing their night defensive positions.

A significant discovery in the area by the 3-187 IN was a group of documents identifying the unit involved in the contacts as the 29th NVA Regiment. The documents indicated that the 29th NVA Regiment had returned from North Vietnam in April and had been conducting reconnaissance operations between Base Area 611 and Laos and Route 548 in the A Shau Valley.

Elements of the 1-506 IN BN while maneuvering near the Laotian Border west of Ta Bat received mixed 60mm and 82mm mortar rounds resulting in seventeen wounded, all of which were later evacuated. The 2-501 IN BN, on the other hand, encountered minimal contact during the day, but resulted in five enemy killed.

With the battalion's command post at FB Bradley, elements of the 2-1 ARVN Battalion combat assaulted south of FB Tiger (YD 252090) to search out the area of operations. (Narrative Operation APACHE SNOW; MG John M. Wright Jr. Commanding; 10 May – 7 June 1969)

A/1-502 IN conducted a C/A from FSB Lash to D/1-502 IN location at YD645655 and D/1-502 IN moved to FSB Lash and assumed the mission of providing security for FSB Lash. At 0835H, A/1-502 IN was hit by friendly artillery during a recon by fire, resulting in 1 US KIA and 1 US WIA.

- 11 May 1970 1-502 IN, Recon platoon at location 761055 found one 60mm in the ground set as a booby trap. They called in an EOD team. VC of an unknown number fired rockets at a school house and were repulsed by PF forces in the village of Thon Thong. PF platoon 100 engaged one VC and thought they wounded him in the leg. A seep under illumination produced negative results.
- 11 May 1970 Operation TEXAS STAR: D/2-502 IN began the sweep north with no enemy sightings. C/2-502 IN continued their operations on Hill 714. They began movement to the west to the saddle (YD502072) connecting Hills 714 and Hill 882. Alpha Company began operations to the southwest of FSB Veghel, while B/2-502 IN continued screening, the mission they assumed until the end of the period.
- 12 – 14 May 1968 The 1-502 IN BN had light contact during the days as the Battalion continued the RIF and security missions in the AO. On the 14th, Recon and B/1-502 IN operating with PF's form Quang Dien, killed 1 NVA (BC), 2 VC (BC)
- 12 May 1969 Operation APACHE SNOW: Redlegs and troopers of the 2-501 IN BN fend off a vicious attack on FB Airborne, a Screaming Eagle outpost built in the enemy's A Shau "warehouse area." Thirty-one enemy die—and Airborne remains alive as an irritating roadblock for the enemy. During the Dong Ap Bia fight the 2nd Currahee battalion exploits the warehouse.
- 12 May 1969 Operation APACHE SNOW: The 3-187 IN BN continued their push through the thick bamboo and elephant grass along the rough ridges of Dong Ap Bia. Two air strikes were requested and completed at 0804 hours in support of B/3-187 IN's advance up the hill and C/3-187 IN's advance to the northeast of B/3-187 IN. At 0913H, B/3-187 IN began receiving sniper fire from their rear and by 0921 hours they were receiving intense automatic fire from the front and incoming mortar rounds. To aid in the evacuation of the wounded the battalion commander requested engineer support to blow a landing zone for B/3-187 IN. Attempting an insertion at 1024 hours the engineer ship was hit by RPG and small arms fire causing it to crash and burn resulting in seven casualties.
- B/3-187 IN continued to maneuver against the well-disciplined force, estimated at two companies, which were dug in about 200 meters to their front. The 3-187 IN BN called for ARA and artillery fire in order to dislodge the enemy from his fortified position, but the enemy held fast and throughout the day the 3-187 IN continued to receive heavy automatic weapons and RPG fire interspersed with mortar fire. Heavy air strikes consisting of 500 and 1000 pound bombs (high drag and delayed fuse), in addition to napalm and artillery fire, were continually placed on the enemy's position.
- Meanwhile, the other battalions – 2-501 IN BN and 1-506 IN BN – continued to conduct reconnaissance in force operations throughout their areas of operation encountering limited contact. B/1-506 IN while maneuvering in the vicinity of coordinates YC 309941, encountered three NVA, killing one and capturing his AK-47.
- While on reconnaissance in force operations in the immediate area of the Laotian Border 3-1 ARVN BN discovered a small cache of miscellaneous equipment and weapons – eight individuals and twelve crew-served weapons.
- Simultaneous with the maneuvering of the battalions on the ground, A/2-17 CAV conducted air reconnaissance in the support of the ground forces throughout the area of operations. (Narrative Operation APACHE SNOW; MG John M. Wright Jr. Commanding; 10 May – 7 June 1969)
- 12 – 13 May 1969 FSB AIRBORNE: While being manned by artillery batteries protected by elements of 2-501 IN BN, the base was attacked by the 6th NVA Regiment supported by 46 men from the K-12 Sapper Battalion. The bloody fight which followed left 27 American dead and at least 61 wounded. NVA losses were not accurately known since the attackers had, as usual, taken as many of their dead with them as was possible, but 39 NVA bodies were left behind. C/2-329 ARTY and A/2-501 IN had borne the brunt of the attacks.
- 12 May 1969 The 1-502 IN BN conducted RIF operations with D/1-502 IN providing security for FSB Lash. At 0935H at YC645615 the pointman of C/1-502 IN, 3rd platoon spotted 3-4 VC and opened fire. The results were 1 US WIA and 1 VC KIA. At 1141H at YC647618, C/1-502 IN, 2nd platoon received fire from 3-4 VC, resulting in 1 US KIA and 1 US WIA.
- 12 May – 14 August 1969 Ten days after the inauguration of Richard M. Nixon, the communist leadership resolved to test his will and the will of the American people. COSVN Directive Number 71 ordered the North Vietnamese Army and its supporting local forces to maximize American combat casualties while disrupting lines of communications and disabling the pacification programs.
- In 1969, more than 11,500 American servicemen (and one woman) died in Vietnam, nearly half of them in the first four months of Nixon's presidency. The year's best-known combat action was the battle for Ap Bia Mountain (Hill 937), known as the battle of Hamburger Hill. But over one hundred miles to the south in Quang Tin Province, a little-known but highly significant set of military events unfolded. Shortly after midnight on May 12, 1969, under cover of a moonless sky, two regiments of the 2nd NVA Division with support of local and regional units, a force of perhaps more than 2,500 soldiers, launched an offensive in the eastern third of Quang Tin Province, now part of present-day Quang Nam. This enemy force quickly gained control of nearly 80 percent of the targeted area, and threatened to overrun and capture several key allied military installations, including the provincial headquarters at Tam Ky. The U.S. Army's 23rd Infantry Division, the Americal, was responsible for this tactical area of operation, but proved no match for the well-prepared, highly motivated, and determined enemy. On May 14, a Tactical Emergency was declared when the Americal called for help.
- In the pre-dawn hours of May 15, land lines were busily ringing and FM radios loudly squawking as the plea from the Americal began to be answered. The 101st Airborne Division hastily prepared plans to send a brigade task force south to Quang Tin Province. Clerks, cooks, supply personnel, truck drivers, and other rear-echelon types were rousted from their beds. At 4:30 a.m., division staff met with 1st Brigade staff. Aviation crews were called into briefings while two infantry battalions and the two artillery batteries that supported them were ordered to prepare for extraction from the field and transport to the Camp Eagle/Phu Bai area. Dense early morning fog nestled in the valleys around fire support bases Pike and Lash in the southern end of the A Shau Valley near the border with Laos. As the sun began to illuminate the verdant peaks and ridges of the Truong Son Mountain Range, artillerymen readied their 105mm howitzers, shell canisters, powder bags, and firing projectiles in huge rope nets to be slung beneath Chinook helicopters. Meanwhile, grunts from the 1st Battalion, 501st, and the 1st Battalion, 502nd Infantry regiments boarded Huey helicopters at landing zones around the area of operations. These units belonged to the 2nd Brigade, but were placed under operational control of the 1st Brigade. In turn, for the duration of Operation Lamar Plain, the 1st Brigade would become OPCON of the Americal.

Charlie Company, 1/501st, was on FSB Pike providing security. Around 9:25 a.m., Alpha Company arrived from the field, and within the next hour its sister companies were there as well. The men knew little, if anything, about the events that were unfolding. But rumors were rampant. Had the war suddenly ended? After more than three months in the A Shau Valley, were the grunts finally going to get that well-deserved stand-down at Eagle Beach on the South China Sea? Before long, the words "Tam Ky" and "Americal" began to circulate among the men. They realized that something big was going on down south. In the east was the distant but unmistakable sound of in-bound helicopters. The men scrambled to their feet to put on their rucksacks. As they braced themselves for the wind and dust storm of rotor wash, flights of the big twin-rotor CH-47 Chinooks arrived at the firebases. Before long, the big choppers were headed east with them carbo-loads of men, equipment, and supplies. Operation Lamar Plain was underway.

Meanwhile, folks in the rear prepared for deployment to Tam Ky as they loaded all available trucks and Jeeps with ammunition, tents, equipment, rations, and all things necessary to support an airmobile brigade task force. Support units also prepared for the trip to Quang Tin Province. These included a maintenance company, a medical company, a signal company, a company of combat engineers, and a forward support and supply element. Aviation crews, which had been working since before first light, boarded their helicopters and headed south. These included an air cavalry troop, a battery of aerial rocketry artillery, an assault helicopter company, an assault support helicopter company, the brigade aviation unit, and a company of medical evacuation helicopters.

After arriving at the Phu Bai airbase, the infantrymen waited to board Air Force C-130 and C-123 transport planes. While they waited, they had hot showers, ice cream, cold sodas, and were entertained by Donut Dollies. The men were given new jungle boots, fatigues, and boonie-hats. They traded damaged weapons for good ones. The division's top brass joined the XXIV Corps commander, along with the division band, to see the troops off.

Tam Ky lies about 40 miles south of Da Nang. Located in the coastal plain, the town is a market center where people come to buy and sell fruits, vegetables, and fish. By mid-afternoon on May 15, 1969, the little airstrip south of Tam Ky was the focus of activity as transport planes from Phu Bai touched down and offloaded men, vehicles, and equipment. While old men and women squatted on their haunches, crowds of noisy wide-eyed children gathered to stare through the barbed-wire fencing that surrounded the airstrip. Young men and boys raced about on motorbikes spooking water buffalo and chickens. The air was clouded with red dust, diesel fumes, and smoke. Darkness fell, but planes continued to arrive throughout the night. As the first day of Operation Lamar Plain drew to a close, nearly 80 tons of supplies and equipment and 751 soldiers from the task force had been delivered to Tam Ky.

While men and materiel continued to arrive the next day, the Screaming Eagles wasted no time going after the enemy. Two 105mm howitzer batteries were transported from Tam Ky to fire support bases Young and Professional. By early afternoon on May 16, they began preparatory fires. As mid-afternoon approached, the 1st Battalion, 501st Infantry, minus Alpha Company, made a combat assault north of LZ Professional and began to conduct reconnaissance in force to the south. Temperatures soared over 100 degrees, and there were many heat casualties.

As the infantrymen began their RIF, they began to find well-established enemy huts, hootches, bunkers, and trenches—some of which had been occupied as recently as the night before. The air cavalry and brigade aerial recon teams also discovered many enemy installations while facing withering fire from .51-caliber machine-gun positions. During the next two weeks, virtually every aircraft assigned to the operation received damage from ground fire, and many were shot down. Infantry contact with the enemy was light for the first two days in the field. However, it was only being a matter of time before that changed.

On the morning of May 18, Bravo Company, 1/501st Infantry began to climb Hill 187, north of LZ Professional. As the third platoon reached the summit, several enemy mortar rounds rained down. As the remainder of the company, joined by recon and mortar platoons, reached the top, a command post was established. Soon thereafter, enemy mortar crews had the CP bracketed. One round fell on each side and a third directly hit the CP. The company commander, Capt. John C. Pape, and the senior medic, Spec 4 Russell Lane Jett, were killed in the blast, while the commander's RTO and five others were wounded. Mortar rounds continued to fall on Hill 187 until late afternoon, eventually killing four men and wounding 18.

Shortly after Bravo came under siege, Charlie Company began receiving intense small-arms and machine-gun fire while following a trail north of Hill 187. The first and third platoons tried an assault on enemy positions atop a small hill. The second platoon was defending the company CP and also engaged with the enemy. The assault on the little hill failed; the men pulled back. There were wounded, and ammo and water were running low. It became essential to secure the area so that a resupply helicopter and medevac could come in. Shortly after the men pulled back, a flight of Douglas A-1E Skyraiders, or "spades," rolled in and passed directly overhead, dropping 500-pound bombs onto the enemy position. Charlie Company eventually secured the hilltop, and the dead, one seriously wounded, and heat casualties were evacuated. As the men began to dig in for the night, they surveyed the surreal scene around them. Melted napalm hung from splintered, blackened vegetation. Tree stumps smoldered. Bomb fragments—ugly jagged chunks of steel—littered the landscape. The stiffening bodies of dead NVA soldiers lay close by. The air smelled of combat and death. The men of Charlie Company would call this hill Ghost Mountain.

The 1st Battalion, 502nd Infantry entered the action on May 19 when they established a command post at Hau Duc. Meanwhile, their infantry companies and recon and mortar platoons conducted combat assaults by helicopter west of Professional and southeast of Tien Phuoc. The object was to seize the high ground surrounding Professional, and take the pressure off of the firebase and district headquarters at Tien Phuoc. Contact with the enemy was generally light and sporadic until May 21 when 1/501 units, northeast of Hill 187, made contact in the early morning. Fighting continued throughout the day as two companies and the recon platoon were ambushed. The fighting was concentrated around a small hill where the enemy occupied well-concealed spider holes, trenches, and steel-reinforced concrete bunkers.

By mid-afternoon, Delta Company was scattered south and east of the hill. They were badly shot up and pinned down by heavy enemy fire. Worse, the location of one of their platoons was unknown. Recon also was hurting after losing its platoon leader, platoon sergeant, and several other men, leaving a Spec 4 rifleman in command. Bravo assaulted the enemy hill position from the northeast and sustained many casualties. They collected the dead and wounded, and set up a CP and aid station.

Charlie Company, in reserve, was ordered to assault the hill late that afternoon. The third platoon stood up on line, shoulder-to-shoulder, and before the command to charge could be given, the enemy opened fire. Immediately, second platoon was ordered into the fight and the two platoons charged across a rice paddy toward the hill. Several men fell wounded in the paddy, and more at the base of the hill as from above, the enemy fired mortar, machine gun, and rocket-propelled grenades. As the men leaped over a stone wall and began to advance up the hill, the first platoon and company CP also came under attack. The enemy tried to encircle them.

Murderous fire brought down several more of Charlie Company's men. But using grenades and fire and maneuver, they reached a second stone wall. Then they were fired on from every direction. Enemy soldiers wearing grass and tree limbs as camouflage rose up from spider holes and trenches and charged from behind. The fighting became very close, often hand-to-hand. There were many acts of personal courage. After taking out several enemy bunkers with light anti-tank weapons and spraying rifle and machine-gun fire into the trees where enemy soldiers had tied themselves with ropes, the 101st moved further up the hill toward a third stone wall, behind which there was a continuous line of spider holes interconnected by tunnels. To the left and right, behind the wall, were bunker and tunnel complexes. Each time a bunker was taken out, more enemy soldiers crawled through the connecting tunnels and trenches, pulled their dead away, and replaced them in the firing positions. The beleaguered grunts finally fought their way to the top of the hill and destroyed the last of the enemy bunkers. They were exhausted, nearly out of ammo and water, and without radio contact with the CP. The two platoon leaders, Don Gourley and Dan O'Neill, made the decision to recover their wounded and withdraw from the hill. After getting the wounded off the hill, Gourley led a group back up the hill to recover the dead, but the tactical situation prevented their recovery efforts. Only with the help of guys from Bravo's third platoon were they able to police up their weapons and equipment, and get their wounded to a makeshift assembly area and aid station. Helicopters, under enemy fire, took out the wounded well into the night. Evacuation of the remaining wounded and recovery of the dead were the priorities the next morning. During the day's fighting, the 1/501st had 12 men killed in action and 49 wounded. Over the next dozen days, the enemy stalked the 101st units with well-placed mortar and sniper fire. Aircraft losses continued steadily. During this period, 18 men were killed and 54 were wounded. A 24-hour cease-fire was declared for May 30, Buddha's birthday.

On June 2, B Troop, 2/17th Air Cavalry inserted its aero-rifle platoon onto Hill 376, Tien Loc Mountain, for a reconnaissance mission. The undermanned platoon consisted of 18 men, including a medic and two Kit Carson scouts. They soon came under small arms fire and were ordered to turn around and go down the other side of the mountain. The two men at the lead were wounded in an ambush and the rest of the unit was pinned down. The medic, Joseph Guy La Pointe, rushed forward to help the two wounded men. La Pointe was hit but continued to administer aid until enemy grenades landed on his position, killing all three men.

As the battle continued into the afternoon, two more cavalymen were killed and several others wounded. The C&C helicopter was shot down over the battlefield. The situation remained precarious. Bravo Company, 1/501st moved onto Hill 376 to relieve the beleaguered cavalry platoon. The next morning, June 3, two more infantry companies and the recon platoon from the 1/501st arrived. For the next nine days, the Screaming Eagles moved up and down the ridgelines assaulting enemy bunkers, often facing murderous machine-gun fire, mortars, and grenades. By the time they left Hill 376 on June 12, they had suffered 23 killed, 34 wounded, and one missing in action. In addition, a helicopter crew of four men from the 101st Aviation Battalion and a passenger were killed in the area, while elements of the 1/46th Infantry suffered casualties south of Hill 376. After a month of bitter fighting in which neither side gained an advantage, Operation Lamar Plain reached a turning point. It became a game of chasing an enemy that avoided contact while moving toward its sanctuaries deeper in the interior. Operations intelligence identified possible base camps and other enemy locations. Some were the subject of combat assaults, only to find the enemy had moved out ahead of assaulting units. Other locations were the targets of B-52 air strikes.

Then, in late June and early July, the 1/502nd Infantry started to make contact around Hau Duc. They found many enemy trails and a large transportation route. They also located enemy huts and a medical complex in which supplies were cached.

On the morning of July 8, Alpha Company, 1/502nd Infantry made a grueling march to a location about 3 km northeast of Hau Duc. There, in a fallow rice paddy, they were supposed to rendezvous with a resupply helicopter. Capt. Chuck Scribner ordered his third platoon to move forward and recon the area before putting out two squads as perimeter security. As those two squads advanced, the lead squad discovered a line of comms wire. When they reported their finding, they were ordered to follow the wire, which led to a small hootch. With a man on each flank, the squad leader stepped forward and fired into the hootch, killing three NVA soldiers.

The lead squad then turned around and moved back down the trail. Suddenly they heard intense rifle and machine-gun fire. The second squad was caught in an ambush with the enemy positioned on the right side of the trail, and a pair of machine guns, one located on each side, firing directly down the trail. Enemy mortars located on higher ground supported the ambush.

Under intense fire, the ambushed squad maneuvered to form a small defensive position, and desperately fought amid a hail of mortar and RPG fire. Meanwhile, the enemy flanked the lead squad under cover of mortar fire. A fierce firefight ensued. During the confusion of battle, some of the men became separated from the squad while others fell wounded or dead. Late in the afternoon, Alpha's three dead and five wounded were evacuated by helicopter to Chu Lai. The enemy finally broke off the fighting at around 8:00 p.m. There was no radio contact with the two cut-off platoons. Thirteen men were declared missing in action.

During the night, the enemy searched some of the bodies of the missing Alpha Company soldiers; some were still alive and feigned death. Toward morning the enemy recovered and buried their dead, and began to move out of the area. They left behind some snipers and a small harassment force.

Early on the morning of July 9, Bravo Company, 1/502 arrived to secure the area while members of Alpha Company began a search for their missing men. An air cavalry Loach pilot spotted Ted Brenner, Duane Scott, and John Hanie, three of the missing men. The pilot, Luther Lassiter, landed his chopper. Scott and Hanie crawled inside the cockpit while Brenner hopped onto a skid. The overloaded chopper labored to lift off, but Lassiter managed to gain altitude and fly the soldiers to Hau Duc. When Lassiter returned to the area, he rescued a fourth soldier, Julius Bray.

Troops searching on the ground found two men, Kenneth Walker and Nelson Lucas, alive but wounded. By late morning, the bodies of six soldiers were recovered. The body of the thirteenth missing man, Sgt. James Manning, was not found until the following day.

For the remainder of Operation Lamar Plain, the Screaming Eagles continued to chase the enemy and engage whenever possible. Most of the operation was by then confined to the southern portions of the tactical area. Because the enemy had mostly broken up into many groups of fewer than ten soldiers, the operational tactics changed from RIF to saturation patrols, many of them in the vicinity of Fire Support Base Boxer. These patrols revealed extensive bunker and tunnel complexes, hospitals, classrooms, and other enemy structures. Many graves containing enemy soldiers killed by artillery and air strikes also were discovered. During this latter stage of the operation, 24 American soldiers and airmen were killed and 58 were wounded.

Early in the afternoon of August 11 an Air Force C-130 departed Tam Ky with a load of grunts from the 1/501st Infantry. They arrived at Camp Evans and were taken home to LZ Sally via trucks. Over the next three days, transport flights, vehicle convoys, and helicopters continued to take the Screaming Eagles home, and Operation Lamar Plain officially ended at 8:00 a.m. on August 14, 1969.

Sandwiched between the fighting at Ap Bia Mountain during Operation Apache Snow and the siege of Firebase Ripcord during Operation Texas Star the following year, Operation Lamar Plain was one of the last extensive operations conducted by the 101st Airborne Division against the North Vietnamese Army. Lamar Plain received little media attention, however, even though 126 men died, 404 were wounded, and it occurred because of a tactical emergency.

Even today, few people outside of those who participated in Lamar Plain know anything about it. The families of many of the men who died in the fighting during Lamar Plain believed that their loved ones died on Hamburger Hill, and many of the soldiers' obituaries reflect that.

The men who fought in Operation Lamar Plain are proud that they came to the aid of another military unit in a time of crisis, allowing that unit to recover from its losses and eventually return to normal combat operations. (Bitter Fighting in Quang Tin: Operation Lamar Plain; By Roger Ables)

The 2-501 IN BN moved to Phu Bai Combat Base to conduct battalion refresher training and returned to operational control of the 2nd BDE. (Operation Report – HQ, 101st ABN DIV (AM), Period Ending 31 July 1970)

Operation TEXAS STAR: 2-502 IN BN Recon platoon and elements of the 3rd platoon, A/326 ENG repelled onto the top of Hill 882 to cut an LZ. The last helicopter into the area received small arms fire, forcing the chopper to land at FSB Shock and seriously injuring the pilot. ARA was employed, and the engineers once again began the dangerous and arduous task of blasting the LZ under enemy fire. D/2-502 IN continued their sweep north to the top of Hill 882 with no enemy contact. Two bunkers were found and destroyed, and two enemy bodies killed by air strikes were found. Twenty-Four M-16 rifle magazines were found on and around the bodies indicating the enemy had used M-16 rifles. No weapons were captured, however. Charlie Company continued to move west.

A/2-502 IN combat assaulted to the top of Hill 882 on the LZ prepared by the engineers. They joined forces with the Recon platoon and began movement along the ridge line to the east to line up with C/2-502 IN in the saddle. D/2-502 IN, having cleared the ridge to the top of Hill 882, began a sweep back to the south.

Three planes took ground fire from location 864159. Intelligence indicated 56 unknown persons moving in area immediately south of Arsenal. The firebase will be on 100% alert tonight.

Operation Malheur: One company of the 1-327 IN BN was engaged by an estimated VC compared size force resulting in 1 U1S KHA, 5 US WHA, loss of 2 M-16 rifles, 13 VC KIA (C), and 2 individual weapons and 12 Chicom hand grenades captured. Eleven other light contacts by the 1-327 IN BN resulted in 2 US WHA, 16 VC KIA (C), 16 detainees and 5

individual weapons, including 2 M-16 rifles, captured. Three light contacts by the 2-327 IN BN resulted in 6 VC KIA (C), 1 detainee, 10 individual weapons, including 1 M-79, captured and the discovery of a weapon cache containing 34 individual weapons and 1 12.7mm Chicom machine gun. Five light contacts by the 2-502 IN BN resulted in 5 VC KIA (C) 1 detainee, and 2 individual weapons captured. A/2-17 CAV conducted an airmobile cordon and search operation in a hamlet to the south of CAPENTAN Base resulting in 2 detainees. (Combat Operations After Action Report, Operation Malheur (MACV/RCS/J3/32)

Paratroopers of A/2-502 IN and D/1-502 IN completed a successful cordon of Co Thap village eight miles northwest of Hue. The infantry surrounded an NVA battalion suspected of protecting a nearby enemy regimental headquarters and were joined by members of A/2-17 CAV. The two-day battle resulted in 38 NVA killed and 11 weapons captured. (Rendezvous with Destiny; Volume 1, Number 2; July 1968)

Operation DELAWARE: At 1215H, 2-502 IN Recon platoon vicinity YD594177 engaged tow NVA.VC along trail with SA. Received return fire from approximately platoon size enemy force. Recon withdrew across a stream after capturing one NVA/VC with documents. Results: 1 NVA/VC Captured.

Operation APACHE SNOW: On the morning of 13 May, at 0330H, FB Airborne was assaulted on three sides by elements of the 806th NVA BN and the K12 Sapper BN supported by 82mm mortar and RPG fire. FB Airborne (YD 355072) is located on the eastern lip of the A Shau Valley on the north end of a long ridge running parallel to the Valley, and was defended by A/2-501 IN, and three artillery batteries – C/2-11 Artillery (4 tubes 155mm), C/2-319 Artillery (4 tubes 105mm0, and a composite battery (4 tubes 105mm) form B/2-319 ARTY and C/2-319 ARTY.

After infiltrating through the concertina wire on the north side of the perimeter the attacking force systematically crisscrossed the northern portion of the fire base tossing satchel charges and grenades in the bunkers they encountered. By 0500H, the enemy attack had lost impetus and the men of Airborne drove the attacking force from the hill killing forty of the sappers, while suffering twenty-two killed and sixty-one wounded. In addition, five howitzers were either damaged or destroyed. (HQ, 101st Airborne Division (Airmobile); Operational Report – Lesson Learned, 101st Airborne Division (Airmobile) for period ending 31 July 1969; 09 December 1969)

Operation APACHE SNOW: The situation remained unchanged for the 3-187 IN BN on 13 May as the companies conducted reconnaissance in force operations in their immediate areas. A/3-187 IN moved to the battalion command post and relieved D/3-187 IN of the security mission, and D/3-187 IN moved to assist B/3-187 IN and C/3-187 IN. Throughout the day the enemy employed small arms, RPG, automatic weapons, and mortars from well entrenched positions against the maneuvering elements of 3-187 IN. The 3-187 IN returned fire and employed additional artillery and tactical air which heavily pounded Dong Ap Bia's western slopes.

During the day a med-evac helicopter, while extracting wounded from D/3-187 IN at 1536H, was shot down by small arms fire from suspected enemy location YC 328993 and YC 324988, resulting in six killed and one wounded. The A/3-187, 3rd platoon moved to link up with D/3-187 IN at the crash site and assisted in the evacuation of the wounded back to the battalion headquarters.

STRIKE HISTORY (Citation's and Awards):

PFC Philip P. Jenkins (A/2-502 IN) was awarded the Silver Star Medal (Posthumously) for gallantry in action in the Republic of Vietnam. Private First Class Jenkins distinguished himself on 7 May 1966 during a search and destroy mission near the Cambodian border in the Republic of Vietnam. With keen alertness, Private First Class Jenkins detected a Viet Cong ambush consisting of at least ten insurgents armed with automatic weapons. Realizing that elements of his platoon were already in the killing zone, he exposed himself, shouted a warning to his comrades, and immediately delivered a heavy volume of fire on the insurgents. As a result, the Viet Cong concentrated all their firepower on him and his fellow soldiers reached cover. With complete disregard for his safety, Private First Class Jenkins assaulted the insurgents while receiving hostile fire. Although critically wounded about 15 feet from the Viet Cong position, he continued to place effective fire on the insurgents and killed two Viet Cong before he died. Inspired by the gallant actions of Private First Class Jenkins, his comrades assaulted the Viet Cong and forced them to disperse into the jungle. Private First Class Jenkins' extraordinary heroism in close combat against a hostile force was in keeping with the highest traditions of the military service and reflects great credit upon himself, his unit, and the United States Army. (HQ, USARV; General Orders Number 4036; 21 June 1966)

He stayed at his forward position for nine hours until the listing post could be safely brought in. His action resulted in heavy enemy losses and was an inspiration to those who witnessed his bravery. First Lieutenant Land's personal bravery and devotion to duty were in keeping with the highest traditions of the military service and reflect great credit upon himself, his unit, and the United States Army. SGT Donald E. Bear (A/2-502 IN) was awarded the Silver Star Medal for gallantry in action in the Republic of Vietnam. Sergeant Bear distinguished himself on 8 May 1966 during a search and destroy mission near Bu Gia Map, Republic of Vietnam. While enroute to join the rest of the company, Sergeant Bear's platoon received intense hostile fire from a well-fortified Viet Cong force. After observing his platoon leader in a precarious position struggling to free himself from some tangled vines while directly in the line of hostile fire, Sergeant Bear charged and silenced a Viet Cong position. Although he was exposed to the Viet Cong fire, Sergeant Bear succeeded in reaching his platoon leader. Later while pursuing the withdrawing Viet Cong, his platoon ran into a second Viet Cong position. Acting as point man, Sergeant Bear began to reconnoiter the area by fire and forced the hidden insurgents to fire prematurely. Although wounded, SGT Bear continued to fire on the Viet Cong positions which were only 50 meters away. As a result, he prevented an ambush. Sergeant Bear's extraordinary heroism in close combat against a hostile force was in keeping with the highest traditions of the military service and reflects great credit upon himself, his unit, and the United States Army. When the large Viet Cong force threatened to overrun his position, Specialist Four Kirtley delivered suppressive fire on the attacking insurgents. Although the Viet Cong maneuvered within fifteen meters of his position, he refused to abandon his stricken comrades. When the remainder of the platoon arrived, and sustained an additional casualty, Specialist Four Kirtley again exposed himself to the hostile fire to assist the injured man. Assured that all casualties had been treated, he then moved to the body of a dead comrade, defended his body, and denied the Viet Cong his equipment and weapon. 2LT William F. Otto (A/2-502 IN) was awarded the Distinguished Service Cross (Posthumously) for extraordinary heroism in connection with military operations against an armed hostile force in the Republic of Vietnam. ON 11 May 1966, Lieutenant Otto, a member of Company A, 2d Battalion (Airborne), 502d Infantry, 101st Airborne Division, was participating in a search and destroy mission when they captured a Viet Cong who revealed that a four-company ambush was set forward of the company along their axis of advance. To foil the ambush, Lieutenant Otto placed a point squad well to the front of his platoon that was the company's lead element. Approximately 0900 hours, Lieutenant Otto's platoon came intense small arms and automatic weapons fire from the front. Lieutenant Otto rushed forward, braving the insurgent fire to estimate the situation. He then placed two squads on line to assault the well-entrenched Viet Cong and again braved the hostile fire fearlessly moving along the assault line to direct his squad leaders. The platoon attempted an assault but was pinned down as the insurgents unleashed a devastating volume of fire. Lieutenant Otto called for artillery fire and airstrikes. With professional skill, he called artillery fire to within 30 meters of his position making a direct hit on a machine gun emplacement; however, this failed to destroy it. Realizing that the bunker must be destroyed. Lieutenant Otto again personally braved the fire and crawled to within 15 meters of the machine gun bunker. Disregarding the danger from other machine gun emplacements in the immediate area, he arose and threw a grenade into the bunker destroying the gun and crew. Being fully exposed so he could throw the grenade, another machine gun mortally wounded him. During the course of action, a platoon leader was killed. Unhesitatingly, Captain Lunde moved through the bullet swept area to the platoon which was engaged in a vicious firefight. With complete disregard for his safety, he moved among his men, inspiring them and rallying them to defend their positions. He then returned to the center platoon and began to skillfully direct friendly air strikes and artillery fire. SGT Grady L. Towns Jr. (D/2-501 IN) was awarded the Silver Star Medal for gallantry in action in the Republic of Vietnam on 11 May 1968. Sergeant Towns distinguished himself while serving as a squad leader with Company D, 2d Battalion, 501st Infantry, near Hue, Republic of Vietnam. On the evening of the cited date, Sergeant Towns led a ten-man patrol from company's night defensive perimeter to set up an ambush along a well-used trail leading out of the mountains. After the patrol had been in position for approximately four hours, Sergeant Towns observed movement to his front and counted thirty North Vietnamese troops walking down the trail in file formation. Seeing that his men were already alerted, he waited until the last possible moment to allow a large number of the enemy to enter his killing zone. The ambush was initiated when one of the enemy discovered a Claymore mine and attempted to cut the wire. In the fighting which followed, Sergeant Towns remained in an unprotected position to direct the fire of his men against the numerically superior enemy force. When the enemy discovered the friendly ambush position, they maneuvered around to the flanks. Sergeant Towns immediately ordered his men to withdraw, while he remained behind under the increased volume of hostile fire to give counter fire for his element. Without regard for his own safety, he continued to fire upon the enemy until all of his men had safely withdrawn. Sergeant Towns' personal bravery and devotion to duty were in keeping with the highest traditions of the military service and reflect great credit upon himself, his unit, and the United States Army. Parker Jr. (E/2-501 IN) was awarded the Distinguished Service Cross for extraordinary heroism in connection with military operations involving conflict with an armed hostile force in the Republic of Vietnam, while serving with Company E, 2d Battalion, 501st Infantry, 101st Airborne Division (Airmobile). Platoon Sergeant Parker 1969 when Fire Support Base Airborne came under intense mortar and rocket grenade attack, followed by an enemy sapper assault on the perimeter. With the first incoming rounds, Sergeant Parker rallied his mortar crews and commenced firing illumination and high-explosive rounds on the hostile fire that rained around his mortar emplacement, Sergeant Parker made his way to the platoon leader to warn of the ground attack on two sides of the compound. Suddenly a rocket-propelled grenade struck one of the mortar emplacements and knocked it out. Running to the position, Sergeant Parker immediately set up the mortar tube and started firing on the enemy. Although a satchel charge thrown at his position momentarily stunned him, he continued his mission, often exposing himself to the enemy barrage to obtain re-supplies of ammunition. On one of his trips to the munitions stockpile, he was attacked by four sappers armed with satchel charges, and he eliminated them with a well-thrown grenade. Through his courageous example, the Fire Support Base successfully repelled the enemy attack. SGT Roger J. Barski (A/2-501 IN) was awarded the Silver Star Medal for gallantry in action in the Republic of Vietnam on 13 May 1969. Sergeant Barski distinguished himself while serving as a squad leader in Company A, 2d Battalion, 501st Infantry at Fire Support Base Airborne, in the A Shau Valley, Republic of Vietnam. During the early morning hours of the cited date, the base was attacked with heavy mortar fire. Simultaneously, a group of North Vietnamese sappers penetrated the perimeter, throwing satchel charges through doors and bunker apertures. The First Platoon's sector of the perimeter bore the brunt of the initial main sapper attack, and the platoon leader and platoon sergeant were seriously wounded in the initial conflict. Sergeant Barski immediately took charge and rapidly set up a makeshift defense. Suddenly an enemy mortar round knocked out the friendly mortar used to provide illumination. Sergeant Barski realized the enemy force was preparing to overrun his platoon again, and that the absence of illumination was to the advantage of the advancing enemy. Realizing his platoon would be helpless in the face of a human wave assault; he left his cover and dashed for the supply of boxed star parachute flares located in the Command Post bunker. Despite the heavy enemy mortar fire, which was landing within the entire perimeter, he managed to reach the needed flares. As he maneuvered back toward his platoon, he encountered two North Vietnamese soldiers in his path. He fired at the enemy, killing one and wounding the other. He then provided continuous illumination by hand flares until a flare helicopter arrived. The heavy enemy attack was eventually repulsed. His heroic actions, with complete disregard for his own safety, were responsible for preventing his platoon from being overrun. Sergeant Barski's personal bravery and devotion to duty were in keeping with the highest traditions of the military service and reflect great credit upon himself, his unit, and the United States Army. PFC Vick L. Burnette (E/2-501 IN) was awarded the Silver Star Medal for gallantry in action in the Republic of Vietnam on 15 May 1969. Private Burnette distinguished himself while serving as a mortar gunner in Company E, 2d Battalion, 501st Infantry, during combat support operations in the A Shau Valley, Republic of Vietnam. At approximately 0330 hours on the cited date, Fire Support Base Airborne was attacked by an estimated battalion of North Vietnamese Army Regulars. The enemy force consisted of an infantry element, mortar section, and sapper squads. Waves of insurgents stormed the perimeter from two sides and immediately penetrated the barbed wire and defensive positions of the bunker line. Enemy Soldiers combed the fire base, hurling satchel charges and engaging in hand to hand combat with men in night defensive positions and mortar crews. A satchel charge exploded beside Private Burnette, amputating his leg below the knee. Despite the loss of his leg, he continued to engage the enemy with his weapon. Maintaining a heavy volume of fire, he blocked the path for the enemy to pass his position and gave the mortar crews enough time to assemble and prevent the mortar section from being overrun. He continued to pinpoint the locations of the attacking enemy to his fellow Soldiers, even though in great pain and steadily weakening from loss of blood. Private Burnette's personal bravery and devotion to duty were in keeping with the highest traditions of the military service and reflect great credit upon himself, his unit, and the United States Army.

SFC George W. Parker Jr. (E/2-501 IN) was awarded the Silver Star Medal for gallantry in action in the Republic of Vietnam on 13 May 1969. Sergeant Parker distinguished himself while serving as platoon sergeant of the mortar section of Company E, 2d Battalion, 501st Infantry, during combat support operations in the A Shau Valley, Republic of Vietnam. At approximately 0330 hours on the cited date, Fire Support Base Airborne was attacked by an estimated battalion of North Vietnamese Army Soldiers. The enemy force consisted of an infantry element, mortar section, and sapper squads. The enemy force assaulted the perimeter from two sides under the cover of a heavy mortar barrage. The enemy Soldiers penetrated the perimeter line obstacles and immediately engaged the night defensive positions of the fire base. Supported by the infantry, sapper squads moved among bunkers and mortar positions, hurling satchel charges and engaging in hand to hand combat with the defenders. In the immense confusion, Sergeant Parker moved among his mortar crews utilizing his M-16 rifle to cover his advance. While assisting a mortar crew, an exploding satchel charge knocked him unconscious. Upon regaining consciousness, he continued to direct mortar crews in the firing of illumination and high explosive mortar rounds. In the process, he was knocked down three additional times by exploding satchel charges. Sergeant Parker's personal bravery and devotion to duty were in keeping with the highest traditions of the military service and reflect great credit upon himself, his unit, and the United States Army. PFC William D. Poole (A/2-501 IN) was awarded the Silver Star Medal (Posthumously) for gallantry in action while engaged in military operation involving conflict with an armed hostile force in the Republic of Vietnam on 13 May 1969. Private First Class Poole distinguished himself while serving as assistant machine gunner with Company A, 2d Battalion, 501st Infantry. Company A had just moved to Fire Support Base Airborne in order to secure the area prior to moving into the northern part of the A Shau Valley, Republic of Vietnam. During the early hours, a barrage of mortar rounds began to fall on the partially completed camp, many of them smashing into bunkers manned by friendly troops. Simultaneously, a wave of North Vietnamese sappers pierced the perimeter, heaving satchel charges through the bunker apertures. The friendly forces were caught by surprise by the attack, but fought back heroically. Private Poole was serving as an assistant machine gunner for the Second Platoon and when the platoon defenses were threatened by a wave of satchel-carrying sappers, the machine gunner directed fire into the battalion size enemy force attempting to keep the sappers at a distance where the deadly satchel charges could not be employed. During the ground fighting a deluge of mortar rounds impacted within the perimeter. At a critical point in the action. Private Poole's weapon ran low on ammunition. He reacted immediately to the emergency and abandoned the comparative safety of his bunker to crawl toward the ammunition dump twenty meters away. Enemy mortars continued intent on reaching the much-needed ammunition. Although a burst of shrapnel hit him he continued to crawl until he reached his goal. As he was moving back toward his bunker with the ammunition, a mortar round exploded to his immediate front. Though mortally wounded Private First Class Poole tossed the belts of ammunition and the machine gun was able to continue issuing sustained fire. Private Poole's personal bravery and devotion to duty were in keeping with the highest traditions of the military service and reflect great credit upon himself, his unit, and the United States Army. SGT Thomas L. Roehm (A/2-501 IN) was awarded the Silver Star Medal for gallantry in action in the Republic of Vietnam on 13 May 1969. Sergeant Roehm distinguished himself while serving as a squad leader in Company A, 2d Battalion, 501st Infantry. Company A was in the process of fortifying Fire Support Base Airborne, in the mountains west of Hue, Republic of Vietnam. At approximately 0330 hours on the cited date, the base was hit by a combination mortar barrage and sapper assault launched by elements of three North Vietnamese battalions. Sergeant Roehm directed the activities of his squad against the advancing insurgents, successfully thwarting repeated enemy attempts to overwhelm his position. The platoon's Command Post bunker was then hit with multiple mortar rounds. Sergeant Roehm rushed to the battered Command Post position, ignoring the rounds exploding all around him. He applied lifesaving first aid to the wounded members of the group until the platoon medical aidman arrived. He then attempted to establish communication with the company Command Post but the platoon radios had been damaged beyond repair in the mortar strike. He then maneuvered to nearby Company E, where he realized that he was the only noncommissioned officer left in the sector. He immediately began to reorganize the remnants of the area's perimeter defense. He personally led his men against the sappers who had penetrated the perimeter, killing several of the enemy with his M-16 rifle. After reestablishing security in his sector, he assisted in the defense of the rest of the fire base by openly facing the enemy fire in the process. Late in the action, he personally directed the evacuation of the wounded personnel. Sergeant Roehm's personal bravery and devotion to duty were in keeping with the highest traditions of the military service and reflect great credit upon himself, his unit, and the United States Army. PFC Roger A. Veis (E/2-501 IN) was awarded the Silver Star Medal for gallantry in action in the Republic of Vietnam on 13 May 1969. Private Veis distinguished himself while serving as a mortar gunner in Company E, 2d Battalion, 501st Infantry, at Fire Support Base Airborne, Republic of Vietnam. At approximately 0330 hours on the cited date, the fire base was attacked by an estimated North Vietnamese Army Battalion. The enemy force consisted of an infantry element, a mortar section, and sapper squads, assaulting the fire base from two sides. Within minutes, the insurgents passed through the perimeter line defense, and close combat began in bunkers and mortar positions. Private Veis continued to fire illumination rounds throughout the attack. During the attack, he was knocked away from his mortar tube three times by exploding satchel charges, only to crawl back and again begin to fire from his position. Even though wounded, he continued to fire the mortar and was an inspiration to his fellow Soldiers. Private Veis' personal bravery and devotion to duty were in keeping with the highest traditions of the military service and reflect great credit upon himself, his unit, and the United States Army. SGT Anthony J. Branco (E/2-501 IN) was awarded the Bronze Star Medal with Valor for heroism in ground combat against a hostile force in the Republic of Vietnam on 13 May 1969. Sergeant Branco distinguished himself while serving as a mortar squad leader in Company E, 2d Battalion, 501st Infantry, at Fire Support Base Airborne, Republic of Vietnam. At approximately 0330 hours on the cited date, the fire base was attacked by an estimated battalion of North Vietnamese Army Soldiers. The insurgents fought through the perimeter and spread throughout the fire base, throwing satchel charges and firing automatic weapons. Despite the enemy fire and shrapnel from exploding mortar rounds, Sergeant Branco remained at his mortar position, firing illumination rounds into the early morning darkness. A satchel charge thrown within a few feet of this mortar tube wounded the ammunition bearer. After Sergeant Branco moved the wounded ammunition bearer to a safe location and administered first aid, he had the double task of supplying the mortar tube with ammunition and firing the illumination rounds. Although the early morning darkness hindered visibility, he made several trips to the ammunition storage point. In the process of carrying an armful of ammunition to the mortar position, he received shrapnel in his hip. Despite the painful shrapnel wounds, he was determined to have the mortar position remain operational. He succeeded in maintaining almost continuous illumination over the fire base until daylight arrived. Sergeant Branco's personal bravery and devotion to duty were in keeping with the highest traditions of the military service and reflect great credit upon himself, his unit, and the United States Army. SGT Joseph A. Palazzolo (E/2-501 IN) was awarded the Bronze Star Medal with Valor for heroism in ground combat against a hostile force in the Republic of Vietnam on 13 May 1969. Sergeant Palazzolo distinguished himself while serving as a radar team leader in Company E, 2d Battalion, 501st Infantry, during combat operations in the A Shau Valley, Republic of Vietnam. At approximately 0330 hours on the cited date, Fire Support Base Airborne was attacked by an estimated North Vietnamese Army battalion. The enemy force consisted of an infantry element, mortar section, and sapper squads. Sergeant Palazzolo and his radar team were thrown from their bunker by an explosion which destroyed the radar bunker. Only after his own men had been taken care of did he allow himself to be treated for his wounds. Even though hampered by fragmentation wounds, he returned to the bunker line where he personally silenced an enemy soldier with his own weapon. He refused to give up fighting until the attack terminated. Sergeant Palazzolo's personal bravery and devotion to duty were in keeping with the highest traditions of the military service and reflect great credit upon himself, his unit, and the United States Army. SP4 Richard A. Powell (E/2-501 IN) was awarded the Bronze Star Medal with Valor for heroism in ground combat against a hostile force in the Republic of Vietnam on 13 May 1969. Specialist Powell distinguished himself while serving as a mortar gunner in Company E, 2d Battalion, 501st Infantry, at Fire Support Base Airborne, Republic of Vietnam. At approximately 0330 hours on the cited date, the fire base was attacked by an estimated battalion of North Vietnamese Army Soldiers. The insurgents fought through the perimeter and spread throughout the fire base throwing satchel charges and high explosives. Despite enemy automatic weapons fire and shrapnel from exploding mortar rounds, Specialist Powell continued to fire illumination rounds over the fire base. He was thrown from his mortar tube three times by explosions, but each time he returned to the mortar tube and kept his mortar crew operating flawlessly, despite the early morning darkness which hindered visibility. Although he was wounded by shrapnel and could no longer operate the mortar tube, his determination to keep the mortar position operational supplied the fire base with almost continuous illumination throughout the attack. His efforts contributed immeasurably to the successful defense of the fire base. Specialist Powell's personal bravery and devotion to duty were in keeping with the highest traditions of the military service and reflect great credit upon himself, his unit, and the United States Army. Throughout the battle, Captain Spoors moved to the defensive positions checking the conditions of the men and their supplies of ammunition. He made several trips to ammunition storage points, securing hand grenades, small arms ammunition, and illumination rounds. Although under intense fire, he could be found at the point of heaviest enemy resistance giving advice, making corrections, and laying down suppressive fire with his M-16 rifle. SGT Edward C. Wicks (E/2-501 IN) was awarded the Bronze Star Medal with Valor for heroism in ground combat against a hostile force in the Republic of Vietnam on 13 May 1969. Sergeant Wicks distinguished himself by valorous actions while serving as a fire direction leader in Company E, 2nd Battalion, 501st Infantry, during combat support operations in the A Shau Valley, southwest of Hue, Republic of Vietnam. At approximately 0330 hours on the cited date, Fire Support Base Airborne was attacked by an estimated battalion of North Vietnamese Army Soldiers. From his position in the Fire Direction Control Center, Sergeant Wicks observed the progress of the attack. He studied the enemy pattern of assault and maintained constant radio contact with helicopter gunships and land-line communication with mortar crews. At times, he had to utilize his M-16 rifle to defend his position as the insurgents threw satchel charges and hand grenades at his bunker. He adjusted the fire of circling gunships on enemy positions just outside the fire base perimeter, foiling several attacks. His accurate calculations to mortar crews brought illumination flares directly over enemy squads rushing the fire base, leaving the enemy force vulnerable to the friendly forces. Sergeant Wicks' personal bravery and devotion to duty were in keeping with the highest traditions of the military service and reflect great credit upon himself, his unit, and the United States Army. Sergeant Counts grabbed his M-16 rifle and ran out of his bunker. Observing a burning bunker to his front, he moved through the intense fire to the flaming structure and pulled out a friendly Soldier who had been blinded by the fragments from exploding satchel charges. He carried the wounded man to a secure bunker and immediately returned to action. He again saw an enemy sapper preparing to engage another friendly bunker, and he silenced the insurgent before he could employ the satchel charge. He then aided in the evacuation of the wounded Soldiers to a rear area. Sergeant Counts' personal bravery and devotion to duty were in keeping with the highest traditions of the military service and reflect great credit upon himself, his unit, and the United States Army. Early in the morning on the cited date, the fire base was hit by a combination mortar attack and sapper assault, launched by elements of three North Vietnamese Army Battalions. Specialist Farabee reacted swiftly to the sapper threat and rushed outside his bunker while under direct small arms fire. He spotted two enemy sappers crawling through the wire and opened fire on them with his M-16 rifle, mortally wounding both. He continued to engage the insurgents in the First Platoon sector while medical aidmen treated the seriously wounded personnel. When the last man was evacuated, he left his position and maneuvered to the howitzer area. Early in the morning on the cited date, the base was hit by a combination mortar and sapper attack mounted by elements of three North Vietnamese Battalions. The sappers poured over the First Platoon's bunker line, intent upon swarming inside the perimeter before the friendly element could defend itself. The members of the First Platoon, bearing the full brunt of the initial assault, fought valiantly to delay the enemy onslaught. Private Hill held his position in one of the hard-pressed bunkers, leveling intense small arms fire against the advancing sapper waves. He continued to fight until an enemy mortar round hit his bunker, mortally wounding him. His stubborn persistence provided the rest of the friendly force with valuable moments to brace themselves for the enemy ground assault. Private Beasley distinguished himself while serving as an ammunition bearer in Company E, 2d Battalion, 501st Infantry, during combat operations at Fire Support Base Airborne, in the A Shau Valley, Republic of Vietnam. At approximately 0330 hours on the cited date, the fire base was attacked by an estimated battalion of North Vietnamese's Army Soldiers. The enemy force assaulted the fire base from two sides, with infantrymen and sapper rushing the perimeter under a heavy mortar attack. At the beginning of the battle, Private Beasley immediately assumed his duties as an ammunition bearer for his mortar position. Despite enemy automatic weapons fire and shrapnel from enemy mortar rounds, he completed several trips through the early darkness to an ammunition storage point securing illumination rounds. During the engagement, an ammunition bearer in an adjacent mortar position was wounded and unable to continue supplying the needed ammunition. Private Beasley realized the seriousness of the situation and doubled his trips to the ammunition point, supplying illumination rounds for the shorthanded mortar position as well as his own. In the process of securing another load, Private Beasley was mortally wounded when an enemy satchel charge exploded near him. Private Beasley's personal bravery and devotion to duty were in keeping with the highest traditions of the military service and reflect great credit upon himself, his unit, and the United States Army. After firing several magazines of ammunition, he manned his howitzer and began firing illumination for visibility and direct fire at the insurgents. When the position was overrun, he moved to the inner perimeter where he again began firing his M-16 rifle at the hostile force, driving them from the perimeter. Although wounded in the ensuing battle, he moved through a mortar and rocket attack in order to help the more seriously wounded to cover. Specialist Miller's personal bravery and devotion to duty were in keeping with the highest traditions of the military service and reflect great credit upon himself, his unit, and the United States Army.
